The Messianic Aleph Tav Interlinear Scriptures

FOREWORD

(By Jeremy Chance Springfield)

The endeavor of William (Bill) Sanford in publishing anew the Hebrew Scriptures in the MATIS (interlinear) format has meant many things to the Body of Messiah. One very important aspect of it has been to present the Hebrew text of Scripture to the reader in a way that highlights a particular Hebraic insight of the inspired Word that all might be blessed: the את Aleph-Tav as a character symbol representing the "strength of the covenant" which also incorporates our Messiah. His presentation of the work has been carefully crafted and beautifully displayed. The heart of the Hebraic Scriptures beats with every appearance of the את Aleph-Tav and an invested effort to appreciate these occurrences in the text can equip us all to see how much the Creator cares for us who are made in His image.

Things change, however, when we arrive at the texts of the New Covenant writings. In the vast majority of versions, there is an abrupt shift when one goes from the Hebrew Scriptures to the text of the New Covenant. This change is due to the fact that most translations use the ancient Greek manuscripts as the basis for their rendition of the content of the New Covenant. As one who uses the Biblical languages (Hebrew, Aramaic, and Greek) and both reads and translates the Word from them on a daily basis, the reality of the difference between Hebrew and Greek is stark. The nature of Hebrew and the nature of Greek are undeniably distinct, and that very real dissonance comes through in any translation attempt, no matter how careful a translator can be in the process of rendering the source material into the new language.

For lovers of the Hebraic Scriptures and the beauty contained in them, it would be a wonderful gift to have at our disposal an ancient text of the New Covenant in the Hebrew tongue to compliment the witness of the Hebrew Scriptures. Unfortunately, there exist at the time of this writing no validated Hebrew New Covenant writings surviving into present day from antiquity. The five Hebrew versions of the book of Matthew,[1] while of interest, are all recognized to be not only late, but manifestly imperfect works. Although a few recently-published editions of the Bible propose that "their" New Covenant text was taken from a Hebrew source, the truth is that such sources are quite provably contemporary translations by known translators, or else are based on assertions that end up shamefully being entire fabrications.[2]

What makes this new version – the completion of the Messianic Aleph-Tav Scriptures – so significant is that it does not use a Greek-based manuscript for translation purposes. Neither does it claim to be from a Hebrew text of uncertain or questionable origin. Rather, this version is important for a very unique reason: the translation is taken from the ancient text of the Peshitta – the New Covenant written in the Aramaic, or as it is commonly called, the Syriac language. It is not a text that has been held in secret for ages, but is the recognized text used for two thousand years by the majority of Aramaic-speaking believers in Messiah from the Middle East. While admittedly not so widely distributed in the Western nations, the Syriac has yet had a known presence and use by the faithful from the earliest days of Messiah's flock.[3]

These versions all share a common theme: they were undertaken originally in order to counter Christian arguments to the Jewish community that Messiah had indeed already come. None were translated by Jews proclaiming faith in the Christian Messiah.

The Aramaic language is a tongue whose origin is lost in the mists of antiquity. It appears early on in the book of Genesis,[4] and is used again in several other places throughout the Hebrew Scriptures. Particularly, we see that parts of the books of Ezra[5] and Daniel[6] are actually written in the Aramaic language. Of all tongues, it is the most similar to Hebrew. In fact, the two languages not only share the exact same alphabet, but they also use many of the same vocabulary words, and have scores of cognates between them. A careful reading of the Scriptures in Hebrew sees repeated instances where the Holy Tongue borrows an Aramaic word here or there – evidence of the close affinity shared by the languages due to the cultural exchange of that time. In this consonance of the languages, the Aramaic of the New Covenant text of the Peshitta provides the reader with transitions from the Hebrew Scriptures that are beautiful and near-flawless in execution. One reading the Hebrew text, and then moving to the Aramaic, will find that the same Spirit is truly at work in the composition of the source-texts. Unlike the Greek, in reading from the Aramaic Peshitta one cannot help but feel the natural, fluid continuation of the Hebrew Bible: the reader is introduced to the את Aleph-Tav in bodily form in the Aramaic texts (words) of the Peshitta in the linguistics that so powerfully mirror the Hebrew.

Historically, Aramaic was known to some extent by the Israelites during the period of the kings, but it was not until the exile to Babylon and the long captivity in those eastern lands that Aramaic began to have a more dominant role in the lives of Abraham's descendants – as evidenced by the use of it in the two aforementioned books written during Israel's captivity in the east. By the time of the return of many Israelites to the promised land, it had transitioned to become the common language of the people[7] – so much so that the Torah / Law was in need of being translated into the Aramaic tongue during times when it was read publicly from the Hebrew scrolls.[8]

This prevalence of Aramaic among the returning Israelites was maintained for centuries, and although Hebrew gained a degree of resurgence after the Maccabean revolt and the subsequent push to restore a decidedly spiritual atmosphere among Israelite society, Aramaic still remained at the forefront of the languages spoken by those in the land. This linguistic environment continued on into the first century – a detail that concerns the reader regarding the translation at present.

The Aramaic text known as the Peshitta has been preserved in astonishingly accurate condition from the earliest of times. The portion comprising the content from the Hebrew Scriptures is generally reckoned to have been finished sometime between 100BCE and 100CE.[9] The scribes who copied the inspired Syriac from one manuscript to another used methods very similar to those employed by the Jewish scribal schools of Masoretic resort, utilizing a corrective textual method of copying referred to as the Karkaphensian tradition. This painstakingly careful method demands and produces as identical of a copy as possible of the one that came before.[10] Because of this, the transmission of the text has been astonishingly trustworthy among all ancient Biblical manuscripts and text-types, and the Body can rest assured of the antiquity of the content of the Peshitta.

That the New Covenant was comprised in the Aramaic is promoted by many textual and linguistic evidences. The most singularly notable of those evidences, at least from a content-based standpoint, is the detail preserved for us in Acts 1:19, in which is found the name of the field wherein the body of Judas was buried: Akeldama, and states that such word is from the language of the land. A cursory examination of the linguistic nature of the term Akeldama yields the fact that it is neither Hebrew, nor Greek – but Aramaic!

What the inspired account of Luke to Theophilus at this point is thus explaining for us is that the language of the Israelites was Aramaic! To argue otherwise is to argue against the plain reality of what the historian Luke deemed a truth necessary to share in his account of the deeds of the original students of the Messiah. It would thus be illogical to think that the very people whose language is declared to have been Aramaic would write the eternal words of the Messiah, and then those of their own faith-based deeds, in any language other than their own common tongue.

This reality is further supported in a surprising manner: by looking at words that the New Covenant itself labels as being Hebrew. The details are provided in the Gospel of John, where he writes a word, usually a name of a place, and then designates that term as being Hebrew. In John 5:2, he uses the word Bethesda, and calls it Hebrew. In John 19:13, he uses the word Gabbatha, and calls it Hebrew. In John 19:17, he uses the word Golgotha, and calls it Hebrew. What is surprising in these explanations are that the terms shared are actually Aramaic – not Hebrew! To John, the Aramaic tongue was so prominently in use by his people that it seemed entirely logical to call the language used by the Hebrews Hebrew, even when it was distinctly and unquestionably Aramaic!

An additional evidence that could easily be missed is in Acts 21:37, where Paul is asked by the Roman captain a question that in itself tells us much about the linguistic situation of Israel:

> And as Paul was to be led into the castle, he said unto the chief captain, May I speak unto thee? Who said, Canst thou speak Greek? (KJV)

This particular passage is dealing with events surrounding Paul's presence at the Temple in Jerusalem, and yet the Roman captain asks this Jewish 'trouble-maker' if he can speak Greek. This question would be absolutely unnecessary if Greek were the language of the region. It only makes sense if Greek were a limited, foreign presence in the land. This idea is further confirmed for us in that the passages immediately following this verse show Paul speaking to his brothers in the Semitic tongue of their people, and not in the Greek.

To add to this, the first century historian, Titus Flavius Josephus, an Israelite himself, records information about the linguistic environment of Israel during his day of such interest that it cannot be afforded to ignore:

> For those of my own nation freely acknowledge that I far exceed them in the learning belonging to Jews; I have also taken a great deal of pains to obtain the learning of the Greeks, and understand the elements of the Greek language, although I have so long accustomed myself to speak our own tongue, that I cannot pronounce Greek with sufficient exactness; for our nation does not encourage those that learn the languages of many nations...[11]

The family line of Josephus is of note to what he wrote. He was of priestly lineage. The priestly line in first century Israel were affluent and more closely in league with the Roman government than most of the populace, due to being in many ways invested with helping Rome keep the peace among the common people of the land. As a priest, Josephus was far more prone to being educated in the Roman way of doing things – and that meant a closer experience with the Greek language. This being the case, it is significant that even given this factor, the historian openly admits to the difficulty of learning the Greek tongue, as well as the subsequent limitations even he himself had concerning it. If Greek were truly as prevalent in Israel as is often taught, then this record of history seems entirely out of place.

Mention should also be made concerning the testimony of this historian that he admits to originally writing his accounts in the Aramaic tongue, and based on his own admission above of his difficulty with the foreign language, surely had to have worked with Greek writers to produce copies in that foreign tongue. The following two quotes from his own hand accurately portray the realities of the times and place in which he lived.

[11] Antiquities of the Jews, 20.11.2. Flavius Josephus.

> I grew weary and went on slowly, it being a large subject, and a difficult thing to translate our history into a foreign, and to us unaccustomed language.[12]

Such a detail does not sound like the language of common use by the people of the land was in any way Greek. Rather, he elsewhere declares that the language originally employed to write his works was definitely not the Greek tongue.

> I have proposed to myself, for the sake of such as live under the government of the Romans, to translate those books into the Greek tongue, which I formerly composed in the language of our country, and sent to the Upper Barbarians;[13]

These evidences are strong support for the use of Aramaic by a great portion of the civilized world during first century times. For Josephus to have originally composed his voluminous works in Aramaic and sent them to far regions, it displays a factor that is known to this day: cultural groups isolated in foreign lands continue to hold quite closely to their way of life – and maintaining the use of their particular language is a prominent way that this is done. To the Jews who lived abroad in the Roman Empire, his works in Aramaic were entirely readable, for even dispersed over land and sea, they were unified in the Aramaic tongue. This factor sheds light on why the apostle Paul's letters to the congregations scattered across the Roman Empire are also so vivid and colorful when read in the Aramaic, as opposed to the Greek. He could use the language of his people who lived in exile, just like Josephus did, as well.

The text of the Peshitta, in its Aramaic original, is of distinct note in the many evidences it contains of being an original document, or source-text, of the New Covenant writings. Textually, it is of value in that it preserves the text of the recognized canon of the New Covenant. The other two Aramaic New Covenant texts of antiquity[14] do not – the Curetonian Gospels and the Sinaitic Palimpsest. While both the Curetonian and the Sinaitic are written in Aramaic, these versions address only the Gospel content, not providing any hint of ever attempting more of the New Covenant content that the Peshitta solely provides from the most ancient of times. They are here rejected as trustworthy witnesses to the Messiah's ministry not for this reason alone, but due to myriads of textual problems that are not an issue in the Peshitta.

A brief illumination of the poorly-crafted nature of these Aramaic versions can be seen in early assessment of the textual landscape of the Curetonian Gospels, where the 18th century Biblical scholar, Prof. Henry D. Harman, does well to address the reality of the issues facing that text:

> "[The Curetonian] bears marks in many places of being a first attempt at the translation of the Greek, which in a considerable number of instances it fails to express correctly; and in other cases it renders it in a very clumsy way into Syriac. Upon the whole it is frequently rough, and lacks the elegance of the [Peshitta]."[15]

The text is riddled with many omitted passages, and unwieldy additions not attested to elsewhere. It leaves so much to be desired. In quite similar manner, the Sinaitic Palimpsest comes with its own set of textual problems, not to mention the fact that it is extant only in a scratched-off ghostly form under the over-written history of certain female martyrs of the faith, such as Thecla.[16] Of particular note to the discussion, however, is the heretical perspective of the text that Messiah's birth was, although supernaturally instigated, actually from the seed of Joseph and Mary, and not from the Spirit at all. Consider the Sinaitic Palimpsest's

[14] Although other Aramaic New Covenant texts from antiquity are extant, their translators and / or late ages are established with no debate, and are thus of no concern to the topic of works whose authors and date of composition are not known: The Philoxenian, by Philoxenus, bishop of Mabug (485-519CE); and its revision, the Harclean, by Thomas of Harkel, in Mesopotamia (circa 616CE); and the Syro-Hierosolymitana, a text from Antioch of the year 1031.

[16] Thus the designation of a "Palimpsest." The colophon on the vellum displays the purpose of the writer: to relay the witness of previous women of faith. At some point prior, the actual text of the Messianic accounts, while itself possessing problematic readings, was oddly deemed fit to be effaced, and replaced with a far less significant witness.

unique assertions from Matthew 1:16, 21, and 25 about who the writer believed was the actual father of the Messiah:

> [16]Yaqub begat Yosip, who was betrothed to Maryam, the virgin. He begat Yeshua …
> [21]She shall birth for you a son …
> [25]and she birthed for him a son…[17]

In these odd phrases the thought was spurred by even the earliest of investigators of this text that the writer intended the reader to question the otherwise-established doctrine of the Messiah having been conceived with the Holy Spirit as the Son of the heavenly Father. These passages have engendered debate on whether or not the Siniatic Palimpsest's scribe was subtly promoting the idea that Joseph was the earthly father of the Messiah! Aside from this questionable status of the work, the Sinaitic Palimpsest is also fraught with omissions and very odd readings that have no precedence in other New Covenant witnesses. It also holds unique errors that make it unprofitable for use as a text of authoritative merit to the body of Messiah. Just like the Curetonian Gospels, the Sinaitic Palimpsest is an ancient, but incredibly faulty version of the Aramaic, and the pedigree of both is unattested to in the history of the congregations, as opposed to the firmly-established use of the Peshitta by the faithful in the Middle East for almost two-thousand years.

The Peshitta serves to illuminate an understanding of the New Covenant in its textual nature so pure and defining,[18] but the Curetonian and Sinaitic Palimpsest both display markedly unfortunate scribal endeavors in their text, giving very poor readings, and in many places, omitting entire passages from the flow of the Messianic accounts. The Peshitta alone preserves the whole of the Messianic hope for us from an ancient Syriac perspective. While the Curetonian Gospels and Sinaitic Palimpsest were very quickly disregarded among the early believers, the Peshitta was, from earliest of times, embraced without hesitation to such committed degree that even after the split of the Semitic congregations in 431CE due to pressure to conform by the Roman Catholic Church in the West, both disparate sides still adhered to the text itself, with the Western side acquiescing to the alteration of a very few verses in the entirety of the New Covenant by the influence of Rome.[19] At the Council of Ephesus in 431CE, the Roman Catholic Church's newly-decreed position that Mary was Θεοτόκος THEOTOKOS, meaning "Birth-Giver of God," was not accepted by most of the Semitic assemblies of the East, and they refused to acknowledge the spiritual authority of the decisions of the RCC from that point on. Those Aramaic-speaking believers in the East who did side with such a moniker for the mother of Messiah allowed certain textual changes to be made to the Peshitta text, which, to make distinction, has its Western revision now referenced as the Peshitto, with the ancient Eastern text still retaining the use of the older Peshitta.

The text of the Peshitta is to be preferred over the other two Aramaic Gospel texts with their prominent short-comings, but it is also of great worth in the nature of its textual landscape. The features of the Aramaic text of the Peshitta are quite indicative of being a source-text and not the product of a translation effort, especially when brought into comparison with the Greek of the New Covenant texts and their various readings. In fact, as early as 1850, German Biblical scholar, Joannes Wichelhaus, proposed the rich nature of the Peshitta's Aramaic text should be a standard whereby the renderings of various ancient Greek manuscripts of the New Covenant could be properly assessed.[20] This aspect of the Aramaic is a broad subject with a variety of methods to examine that display salient reasons for believing the Aramaic to be a trustworthy text of the New Covenant. It possesses aspects of involved word-play and puns in the original that share many parallels to the Hebrew textual landscape of the Hebraic Scriptures.

A brief example of such word-play is found in the famous words of Messiah in Luke 15:4-5, where it speaks of a man having one hundred sheep, and losing one along the way. It tells us that he when he finds the one, he rejoices. The Peshitta uses a word-play between "one" and "rejoice," employing the terms ܚܕ KHAD for "one," and then ܚܕܐ KHADE' for "rejoice." The pun revolves around the idea that with the loss of "one" there is no "rejoicing," but when "one" is found, "rejoicing" can again occur. In contrast, the Greek uses the word ἓν EN for "one," and χαίρων KHAIRON for "rejoicing,"[21] showing no word-play at work. Messiah's recorded words are filled with these types of word-plays that are absent when compared to their parallel passages in the Greek manuscripts.

[18] The definition of the term PESHITTA actually means "Straightforward / Pure."

[19] The alterations comprised the insertions of Luke 22:17-18; John 7:53 – 8:11; Acts 8:37, 15:34, 28:29; 1st John 5:7. Additionally, word changes of particular meaning were made to the Western Peshitta's text of Acts 20:28, and Hebrews 2:9, and 2:16.

[20] De Novi Testamenti versione Syriaca,quam Peschitho vocant, Libri quattuor. Halis, 1850.

While many such word-plays can be found in the Messianic accounts, they are also present in the letters of Paul when read in the Aramaic – a detail that further substantiates the idea that he did not originally compose his letters to the Diasporic congregations in Greek, but in Aramaic. For example, in Romans 13:8, the apostle admonishes us to owe no man anything but love. The Peshitta's text has the word ܬܟܘܒܢ T'KHUBUN for "owe," and then ܠܡܟܒܒ L'MAKHABU and ܕܡܟܒ D'MAKHEB to twice reference the idea of "love." While not readily apparent in the English and perhaps neither to the untrained even in the phonetic transliteration, these two words are actually from the same root of ܟܒ KHAB "owe / love." The verse ends, in the Aramaic, with a final term to drive it all home: man "owed" his "love" to his "neighbor," being the term ܟܒܪܐ KHABREH, which, while not being from the root of ܟܒ KHAB "owe / love," is distinctly an alliterative referral (KHABREH) to the recipient of that love that is owed. The Greek, in stark contrast, displays no hint of word-play between the terms, choosing instead the words ὀφείλετε OPHEILETE "owe" and ἀγαπᾶν AGAPAN / ἀγαπῶν AGAPON "love," and then no semblance of conclusion in the term ἕτερον HETERON "another,"[22] whereas the Aramaic contains the alliterative KHAB- term for "neighbor." The Messiah Himself uses these terms to make a word-play in Luke 7:36-50, where He speaks about the parable of the "creditor / debtor," and the forgiveness of such "debt" eliciting "love" in the forgiven. These types of word-plays are manifold in the Hebrew Scriptures, as addressed by many scholarly works, but are absent in the Greek translations of them. In like manner, Paul's letters as preserved in the Peshitta are filled with such cleverly worded verses.

Similarly, poetic devices abound that are entirely Semitic, which is of considerable note to those investigating these matters: not only do we find Semitic parallelism and chiastic structures, which, although require some effort to create, can oft-times survive the translation event due to the structural nature of the poetry. Such an example of a complicated chiasm in the Peshitta is found in 1st Peter 5:9-10. The text from the Aramaic side speaks initially of "standing," then being "established," and the concept of "enduring sufferings." The central idea is that of the Deity who has called us by Messiah, and then the chiasm resumes with the idea again of "enduring suffering," being "established," and making us to "stand." The chiastic structure would appear poetically in this manner:

A. stand

B. establish

C. suffering

D. The Deity who calls us by Messiah

C. suffering

B. establish

A. stand

This particular chiasm in the Aramaic did not carry over completely into the Greek manuscripts, which exemplifies just how careful a translator must be to preserve the thought of the original. These Semitic thought parallels are important details to consider when looking at the texts, especially when their occurrence is one-sided!

[22] See Romans 13:8 in Novum Testamentum Graece.

In addition to the word-plays and poetic structures already mentioned, there are also complicated poetic word-plays present in the Aramaic that are essentially impossible to preserve when translating. Such an example is that known as a Janus Parallel, where a thought is given at first, which changes halfway through the passage, and situated in the middle of the text as a pivot point is a term that has a dual meaning in the Aramaic language – one meaning that fits the context of the thought initially presented, and the secondary meaning that fits the context of the thought that is presented in the latter half of the passage. For example, in Mark 9:49, Messiah is nearing completion of a discussion of a person cutting away a hand or a foot if it habitually offends in sinning, so that it is not "removed" completely in the fires of Gehenna. He then introduces the idea of "salt" to close His words, telling us that everything will be "salted" in fire, and then brings up the concept of all sacrifices requiring salt. However, the Aramaic term for "salted" in that instance is ܢܬܚܠܡ NETHM'LAKH, which not only means "salt," but comes from the initial concept of "scattering." In this manner, the term NETHM'LAKH is intended firstly as "scattered" in line with the previous ideas of the removal of offending limbs, and then intended secondarily to be understood as "salted" to refer to the sacrifices which must be offered with salt, according to the Torah. In contrast, the Greek texts contain the term ἁλισθήσεται HALISTHEESETAI,[23] meaning only "salted," with no secondary meaning to connect the discussion like is found in the Aramaic. While these incredibly complicated Semitic Janus Parallels are found throughout the Hebrew Scriptures, they are entirely absent in the Greek translations, but are continually being discovered in the Aramaic of the Peshitta New Covenant text.

These types of facets of the Peshitta's text deserve the attention of laymen and scholar, for their existence aids in bolstering the faith of the faithful and the secular alike that the text at hand is not the result of a translation from the Greek, but very, very likely, precisely the opposite.

The Aramaic text of the Peshitta is also important in that it contains an astonishingly scant number of actual variant words between the different extant manuscripts available to us today. The presence of these variant readings are almost all traced back to the religious split between the congregations of the Middle East in 431CE, where pressure from the Roman Catholic authorities of the West to accept their ruling on the aforementioned title of Mary caused a division among the Semitic believers who used the Peshitta.[24] As explained previously, the division resulted in the texts of those who sided with the West being altered in a few instances to align with doctrines of the Roman Catholic persuasion, with the text of the original Peshitta remaining unchanged. When encountering such variants in a Peshitta manuscript, it can usually easily be determined which religious persuasion is being preserved in the text by that alone.

This factor is significant in that the Greek manuscripts, in contrast, contain many thousands of variant readings, and most of those of any significant difference in meaning cannot typically be explained if one does not look at an outside language – Aramaic – as a possible answer for the variant reading. An intriguing aspect in this is that when such variant wordings are encountered in the Greek, a return to the Aramaic text will often result in determining that a scribe misread the intended meaning of the Aramaic term, which just happens to possess a dual meaning that matches the variant possessed solely by the Greek. While there are many examples from which to choose, I offer here a particularly notable instance of such case from Romans 14:21, where Paul encourages us to forsake the performance of deeds that, while not sinful, might still be mistaken to be such by a fellow believer, and which then causes him to "stumble." The Aramaic text uses the term ܕܡܛܛܩܠ D'MET'TEQEL, which can mean either "stumble," or "offend," or "weight." In contrast, the Greek manuscripts show a disparity of readings, with some opting for προσκόπτει PROSKOPTEI "stumbles," others for a combination of that and σκανδαλίζεται SKANDALIZETAI "offend," while still others preserve instead a reading of λυπεῖται LUPEITAI "made heavy."[25] Each of the variant Greek words and their meanings, which neither sound nor look in any way similar, can be traced back to the three-fold meaning of the one Aramaic term found in the Peshitta. By seeing how the Greek arrived at three different concepts from the singular Aramaic word, it helps the reader to understand that the New Covenant message from the Greek side of things is not as jumbled as critics would have us otherwise believe. However, it takes a return to the Aramaic text to see how the "problem areas" in the Greek begin to dissolve into nothing. Multiple instances like this can be found throughout the Peshitta's text.

Another way that these variants can be resolved in the Peshitta is when the Aramaic term was initially actually misread as being a different term altogether in the process of translating from Aramaic to Greek (which can happen due to the similar construction of some characters in certain Aramaic scripts), and if misread in that manner, the Greek variant term's definition is suddenly arrived-at very easily. An example of this type of smoothing-out of the problematic Greek variant readings can be found in the book of Acts 2:47. There, the term of interest in the Aramaic is ܥܡܐ AMMA "people." The Greek has the majority of its texts containing the reading of λαόν LAON "people." However, one of the oldest Greek texts contains the very different reading of κόσμον KOSMON "world."[26] How does such a variant arise? No suggestable answer is found in the Greek side of things, but if the Aramaic term were misread (as happens in any translation effort to some degree), there is a reasonable explanation: if the Peshitta's term of ܥܡܐ AMMA were misread by a translating scribe to instead be the very similar-looking ܥܠܡܐ ALMA "world," which has only one letter difference, then the minor Greek reading suddenly makes sense in how it happened. The only possible answer for the variant Greek word is found by returning to the Aramaic and seeing that a misreading of the word contained there must have taken place at some point.

A further example of similar nature can be found also in Acts 13:8, with the name of the sorcerer, ܐܠܡܣ Elumas (Elymas in most English renderings). In some Greek manuscripts, the name is given indeed as Ἐλύμας ELUMAS. However, in other Greek texts, it is variously given to instead be Ἑτοιμᾶς ETOIMAS or Ἑτοεμᾶς ETOEMAS.[27] The subtle vowel change does not concern us so much as the prominent consonant change from the LAMDA to the TAU in the Greek. No similarity of construction or phonetics exists between the two letters that would account for the alteration to arise, so the Greek leaves us scratching our head as to the actual name of the sorcerer. The Aramaic again preserves a unique possibility that would give a very probable answer: while the Peshitta's text contains only ܐܠܡܣ Elumas, if we were to write it instead with the variant Greek reading's consonantal difference of a T sound rather than an L sound, the resulting appearance in Aramaic would then be ܐܬܡܣinstead of ܐܠܡܣ. The structural similarity of the Aramaic ܠ LAMAD and the Aramaic ܬ TET are so close that a hasty reading of the word, or a smudged letter, or a letter on the subsequent line beneath this name that overreached its boundaries and touched the bottom of the LAMAD could so very easily account for a scribe misreading the text's name of ܐܬܡܣ and thus creating the variant Greek pronunciation that now exists with no other explanation.

Such instances as given here can only occur one way in a translation event, and the overwhelming evidences all show that happening from Aramaic to Greek. These situations allow the reader of the New Covenant to see that the true text has indeed survived in a trustworthy format. The presence of so many variants in the Greek manuscripts deserves to be addressed in a way that vindicates the education of the ancient scribes and their attention to detail with words they believed – rightly so – to be inspired. The Aramaic of the Peshitta very cogently brings an answer to so many of the meaningful variants that exist in the Greek, allowing the reader to see and appreciate the Greek for what it has preserved for the world – a witness to the more certain inspired text of the New Covenant!

Although the Greek may possess points of problematic readings, those instances can typically be found to disappear when the Aramaic is consulted via explanations such as have been shared thus far. However, one feature of the Peshitta's text is that it sometimes brings forth evidences that what have been preserved in isolated instances in the Greek manuscripts may actually be erroneous readings. The errors are not particularly glaring, nor of a theologically significant nature, but they do very much appear to be errors in the Greek that are not present in the Aramaic, but which can be understood as having come from a misreading of the original Aramaic in the process of translating to Greek.

An error of this type can be seen when comparing the Greek reading of 1st Thessalonians 3:2 with the Aramaic reading of the Peshitta in that verse. The Greek speaks of Paul sending Timothy to the Thessalonians in order to establish the people in the faith, and also "to comfort" them, using the Greek term παρακαλέσαι PARAKALESAI,[28] meaning exactly that. The Aramaic text has the alternate term in that place as ܢܒܶܥ NEBE', meaning "to inquire / question." The Peshitta, therefore, has Paul sending Timothy to the Thessalonians to "inquire" about their faith in the Messiah – to see how they were progressing in what the apostle had formerly taught them. The reason the Aramaic is to be preferred as an original reading here, and the Greek seen as an error, is due firstly to the context of the letter preceding this passage, and then what it subsequently states: they knew of what had been done among the believers in Thessalonica (1:6-10), and that they had to find out about their faith (3:5) – details which make the Peshitta's terminology of "inquiring" a more logical fit than the Greek's version of "comfort." However, the idea that the Greek is an error to be rejected in favor of the proper Aramaic reading stands really on a textual basis. One Aramaic word that could be translated as the Greek manuscript's "to comfort" is the word ܒܥܶܐ N'BAYA, as opposed to the Peshitta's reading of ܢܒܶܥ NEBE'. Although there is subtle difference in phonetic pronunciation, when it comes to the actual spelling of the words, the only difference between them is one single letter – the difference of which shows striking similarity in construction to the letter that does appear in the actual word preserved in the text! It would make sense for a translator to not catch the context of investigation displayed in the passage with the otherwise-logical use of "to inquire," and instead easily misread the term as "to comfort" in the Aramaic, thus creating an error in the fresh Greek translation.

An instance of error in the Greek that is of slightly more substance than the above can be seen in the list of the disciples of Messiah given in Matthew 10:4 and Mark 3:18, and compared to the lists in Luke 6:15 and Acts 1:13. The issue surrounds the identity of the disciple named Simon (not Simon called Peter), who, in the lists of the first two Gospels, is called Κανανίτης KANANITES "the Canaanite," but in the latter two books mentioned above, is called Ζηλωτὴν ZELOTEN "Zealot."[29] It is quite unbelievable that Simon was ethnically a Canaanite when given that Messiah's ministry was solely focused on Israel during His first coming. However, when the Peshitta's text is approached, a somewhat different presentation is given. In the lists above from the first two Gospels mentioned, Simon is there referred to as ܩܢܢܝܐ Q'NANAYA, meaning "Zealous One,"[30] while in the latter two books mentioned, he is called ܛܢܢܐ TANANA, also meaning "Zealous One."

Curiously, even most English translations of the Peshitta, being influenced by previous translations from the Greek, have sided with the traditional interpretation of the Greek, and rendered the Aramaic term again erroneously as Q'NANAYA "Canaanite," when that cannot be further from the truth, as both Greek and Aramaic prove is not the case. Things begin to become clearer when Matthew 15:22 is considered in the matter. The passage speaks of a woman from "Canaan" who approached Messiah for help. The Greek text uses this curious term: Χαναναία KHANANAIA,[31] which is markedly different than its other usage of Κανανίτης KANANITES "the Canaanite." This detail is brought forth to express the distinction in the two terms: throughout the Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures known as the LXX, the word for "Canaan" is Χανααν KHANAAN.[32] It is not rendered as Κανααν. It would be odd to suddenly spell the term in a way it is never otherwise done in either the Greek LXX or the Greek of the New Covenant manuscripts. The Peshitta's reading of the term in Matthew 15:22 is ܟܢܥܢܝܬܐ K'NA'NATA – "a Canaanitess." Of similar significance here is the difference between it and the erroneously-proposed "Canaanite" of ܩܢܢܝܐ Q'NANAYA, which is actually "Zealous One."

The situation is thus that the Aramaic text twice preserves the correct phonetic designation of Simon's political persuasions – he was a Zealot, and then twice translates it into proper Aramaic. The early Jewish readers of the text would recognize Q'NANAYA to rightly be an Aramiacized form of the Hebrew, meaning "Jealous One," so there was no need of further explanation in Matthew 10:4 and Mark 3:18. Luke, in his Gospel at 6:15 and in Acts 1:13 – both texts by his hand, used a distinctly Aramaic term that would be recognized by broader Aramaic audiences. In stark contrast is the Greek, which twice seemingly calls Simon a Canaanite, and then twice calls him a Zealot. By initially only attempting a transliteration of what is found in the Aramaic, with no in-text explanation to go by, the Greek translators created a reading that has suffered mistranslation repeatedly through many versions. Only the properly-understood text of the Peshitta has a unified portrait of the disciple's identity in all four lists. The Greek confuses the translator with a foreign term in the first two lists of the disciples and provides no blatant explanation for what it means.

Examples like these make up the types of mistranslations that are to be found in the Greek when carefully assessing the Aramaic of the Peshitta. The answer to questionable readings repeatedly falls back to viewing the Peshitta as the more logical original reading of the two. In concerning just the textual landscape of the Peshitta, it possesses very key qualities that point to it being a preferred text to the Greek.

The reader can rest assured, however, that the overwhelming content of the Aramaic text matches almost exclusively the content of the majority of the Greek texts, which does so much to show that the message of faith and hope in the Messiah has been preserved in all the ways that matter, even if there are minor problems here and there with the texts as they have survived to this day in manuscript form. However, the plethora of evidences on the side of the Aramaic gives us good reason to seek the את Aleph-Tav in bodily form in the message of the New Covenant much more determinedly in the text (words) of the Peshitta as opposed to the Greek.

For whatever it may be worth to leave the reader, as a student of Biblical languages, and as a committed teacher of the Word, and having studied the Aramaic of the Peshitta extensively for over a decade, my personal opinion can go no higher of it. Rather, my sentiment matches that of Yale College's seventh president, and first professor of Semitics, Ezra Stiles, who delivered his first commencement address in Hebrew, Aramaic, and Arabic, and who said particularly of it:

> "Kindred with this, [the Hebrew,] or rather a bath-kol, and daughter-voice, is the Syriac, in which the greater part of the New Testament (I believe) was originally written, and not merely translated, in the Apostolic age.... The Syriac Testament, therefore, is of high authority; nay, with me, of the same authority as the Greek."[33]

The version now before you has made use of the Aramaic Peshitta in an endeavor to bring the hope of Messiah the את Aleph-Tav to be the Light for all nations. A great and wonderful gift is now shared with the Body of Messiah. May all glory and praise be to the King of Kings! Maranatha!

The Messianic Aleph Tav Interlinear Scriptures

INTRODUCTION

(By Andrew Gabriel Roth)

In 2015 Andrew Gabriel Roth did a series of nearly 4 hours of live teaching providing historical information he had been researching and collecting for years from both historians and religious institutions that prove from these documented sources that the New Testament was originally written in both Hebrew and Aramaic years before it was ultimately translated from these sources into Greek. The following information is excerpts directly from the powerpoint slides used in his teaching that he has graciously provided. I highly recommend viewing Roth's video teachings titled...

The NEW ARAMAIC NEW TESTAMENT TIMELINE

(The Manuscript Timeline)

INTRODUCTION

Over the past 20 years, the Aramaic NT movement which had started as little more than intellectual curiosity done by a few "eccentrics" has blossomed into a bona fide scholarly force to be reckoned with. I have been happy to be a part of this movement, to begin the process of collating texts and discussing them but now a new generation of lay and professional scholars has given rise to a renewed series of questions, only some of which were given their due back in the 1990's. Others were, unfortunately, swept under the rug because the answers were hard to find or wrong assumptions were made. And now, after many years of working through these issues, the time has come to set the record straight about what Aramaic NT Primacy really is, what it isn't, and what it shouldn't have been proclaimed to be in the first place.

In my case, as new evidence became available, I had to re-assess as well. This is proper, not just because it is the duty of any scholar to constantly strive to review their process and improve but also because I invented the term "Aramaic NT Primacy" and others like "Western Five" and "Zorba translators" that are now common, so I should rewrite them as needed. In other words, I brought some of this terminology into the world and I will take it out or re-define it. In doing so, please know I am neither upset nor afraid. In fact, I am overjoyed at all the new tools that make all this possible, along with the fruit of thousands of hours of new research. But a lot of what will seem "new" is actually very old—as I delve into a series of long standing questions that seem to have gone unanswered for years.

When I say, for example, that there are about 360 Aramaic manuscripts of the Eastern text from about the 4th to 9th centuries, what does that mean? What manuscripts? Where are they, and what NT books do they have? Or, when I mention "ancient Peshitta traditions" that touch the apostolic age, what are those? Or how about understanding what exactly the differences are between the Eastern Peshitta and Western Peshitto traditions? Who came first and why? But while this is a story with lots of manuscript references and "scholar speak", I also wanted to make my answers clear and understandable. This matters, because in a way Aramaic NT Primacy will become a victim of its own success if I don't!

In the past even Hebrew Roots people ignored or had no idea about the Aramaic traditions. Now that most of them do know about it, the time has come to correct misconceptions and recover the original text! And I get so many queries begging for better understanding on how the Eastern Aramaic text came to be, and what the manuscripts (MS) are behind it and how to deal with mistranslations of the Greek, and that I wanted to address all these matters as clearly and clinically as possible, but in order to do so we must work backwards. We are going to solve a mystery together as forensic CSI's. First we look at the "scene"—the current state of the Aramaic text—and then we retrace our steps to the very times and places where that tradition began. I promise a lot of surprising twists along the way of this amazing journey!

MATIS

The 1905-20 CRITICAL EDITION

Our first stop is, the 1905-20 Critical Edition. A "critical edition" means scholars have combined the most reliable manuscripts into a complete and continuous document. For the Greek NT, the "critical edition" is known as "Westcott and Hort", named after the scholars who put it together in 1881. The W-H is almost completely based on 2 Greek codices.

For the Aramaic NT, the manuscript base was exponentially larger: More than 70 Eastern and Western texts were consulted for its critical text! Of these 70 or so texts, the most significant ones were Eastern Aramaic text types found in the British Museum. MS 14,470, a 5th-6th century complete NT, is the most important. MS 14,470 was then cross-checked against other 5th-6th century texts that cover parts of the NT (i.e., just the Gospels, just the letters of Paul, etc.). These included MS 14,453, MS 14,473 and MS 14,475. Many later manuscripts, both Eastern and Western, were also consulted, from about 9th-14th centuries. But one of the problems with the Critical Edition was it also heavily inserted later western readings into it. This was done to more align with Western Church—particularly Roman Catholic—sensitivities. US and UK missionaries came to the Middle East and focused almost exclusively on the western text.

This was one reason why, when I began translating for the AENT, I resolved to start with the 1905-20 Critical Text, but then "retro-fit" it back to the original Eastern text as much as possible. And it is the origins of this same Eastern text that is our focus in this study today. On the other hand, it should be pointed out that, for the Eastern Canon which has only 22 books, the Eastern text is more than 95% similar to the 1905-20 CE. The problem is that while the variants are few, what those variants say in terms of theology has a huge impact in understanding what was original.

Starting in the early 200's theological controversies began breaking out between the Church of the East and their ancient partner, the Syrian Orthodox Church, hereafter called COE and SOC respectively. Some of the issues had to do with Gnostic influences, others with bad scribal traditions, and it only got worse as time went on. The fights between the COE and the SOC were a small part of a much bigger fight between Eastern Aramaic assemblies and the Roman Catholic Church. Rome tried to "unify" everyone at the point of a sword, first under Constantine (Nicea, 325 CE) and then others followed, but all failed. By the end of the Councils of Ephesus (431 CE) and Chalcidon (451 CE), it was clear that East and West were going their separate ways without agreement. But Rome kept fighting, and eventually they lured the SOC to come under their authority, and subsequently pressured them to change the text!

The Aramaic assemblies had always left out 5 books (2 Peter, 2 and 3 John, Jude and Revelation) because they did not receive them from living apostles or known associates of apostles. Now however, the SOC had to include these books into their canon, and also revise the older readings for the 22. The result was that the SOC did 2 revisions to the original Eastern Aramaic text. The first is called the Philoxenian, and it was done in 508 CE. Only 1 manuscript of it survives. The second revision—because everyone seemed to hate the 1st one—was done in 616 CE.

That second revision, called "Harkelean" after Thomas of Harkel, the scholar who did it, is now the official Aramaic NT of the SOC. The older and shorter Eastern text however, continued to be used by the COE. So, if we are talking COE it's called Peshit-TA but if SOC it's Peshit-TO. As a result, the SOC text (Peshit-TO) has 27 books, including the Western 5, and changes to the older 22 books. But the COE text (Peshit-TA) is the older "stripped down" version. The different titles reflect the different accents in Eastern and Western Aramaic; Eastern is more AH-centric while Western is more OH-centric.

However, small disclaimer…Even though for the assemblies involved (COE, SOC) the distinctions between Peshitta and Peshitto were paramount, and modern scholars, many whom we are going to quote from in this study, seem to use the terms interchangeably. I have opted to leave those quotes as is rather than change it to what they meant. In any case, for 2 Peter, 2 John, 3 John, Jude and Revelation, the EASTERN text could NOT be used for the 1905-20 CE. Therefore, the later Western manuscripts were needed to provide Aramaic versions of these books. But 1905-20 didn't even use the oldest WESTERN readings at times, so I put those in to my AENT as well. In the end, when all was said and done, the British and Foreign Bible Society (now known as the United Bible Society), released the Gospels in 1905 and then, the rest in 1920. This text, now public domain, was later put into Hebrew style letters and most recently was given full vowels by Ewan Macleod in 2009.

The POLYGLOTS

The editors of the BFBS also wanted to consult "polyglots" or published books showing multiple languages for both Tanakh and NT. There were 6 polyglots that were released from about 1600-1800 CE (Lee, Paris, Pockocke, etc.), but the most important one was called the London or Walton (1654-1657). The Walton, which I have had the honor of holding the original in my hands, is an ideal way for scholars to consult up to 9 languages for any part of the Scripture. The wealthy—for these books were extremely costly—would actually subscribe to get a small part of this text each month until it was finished. When many editions were printed, they would subsequently end up in university libraries all across Europe, where later generations of scholars would flock to consult them. But polyglots themselves need real handwritten original manuscripts behind them to research, collate and set into type.

The Leningrad Level

Now, like Masoretic scribes for the OT, the Aramaic NT had dedicated scribes also that spent many centuries collecting the handwritten manuscripts and figuring out how to standardize pronunciation and pick the best readings. In 1613 this scribal activity reached its zenith with a perfect, 100% legible document called the Leningrad Level, Mingana Syriac MS 148 (1613). The Mingana Syriac 148 Manuscript is the ultimate text of the Eastern Aramaic tradition. It survives in virtually perfect condition, with very few holes, smudges or misspellings. I call it Leningrad Level" because it is to the Aramaic NT what the Leningrad Codex is to the Tanakh: the base text against which all others are measured. Like the Leningrad Codex of 1008, the Mingana is so perfect and complete that one can use it to reference any part of the Biblical text recorded in earlier fragments, and see how the words were supposed to be rendered. As we will see later, the Eastern Peshitta texts are, for all intents and purposes, virtually identical.

The Aleppo Level

And also like the Leningrad Codex, a perfect text like Mingana doesn't happen overnight. There were several earlier volumes of nearly complete Eastern texts that collectively supported the Mingana's readings by almost 1100 years. By comparing these earlier volumes to Mingana, the tradition gets older! I therefore call these nearly complete texts "Aleppo Level" after the Aleppo Codex of 930 CE. The Aleppo Codex, unlike the Leningrad, has some text missing, but it still shows us where the near final form of the text was in the hands of the scribes of that time…same thing with these Aramaic NT manuscripts!

The Aleppo Level texts are:

1)MS 14,470 (5th to 6th centuries)

2)MS 14,448 (699 CE)

3)Yonan Codex (7th to 8th centuries)

4)Khabouris Codex (11th-12th centuries)

5)Houghton Manuscript (1199 CE)
6)Crawford Codex (12th century)
7)MS 17,124 (1234 CE)

So with the "Aleppo Level" texts, the tradition behind the "late" Mingana 148 manuscript (1613 CE), can be shown to go back perfectly intact to at least the mid 400's CE! Again, all one need do when they hit a "hole" in one of these manuscripts, is either consult another Aleppo Level document, or check Mingana.

The Masoretic Level

During this same period of time, from 450 CE to 1200 CE, there were also smaller fragments of texts that went along with the later, larger documents. And both "Leningrad" and "Aleppo" Manuscripts (MSS), along with these smaller ones, comprise the overall "Masoretic" period, or the time when Aramaic NT scribes were maintaining the text. We can then take these early fragments and assemble them into a kind of "Early Master Text"—an even more ancient collection of fragments put together to form a near-complete Eastern Aramaic text centuries removed from their larger counterparts.

Here is what it might look like:

1)MS 14,453-Complete text: Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, 5th century. Supplemented by the same content in 14,449 (6th-7th C), 14,458 (6th-7th C), 14,460 (600 CE), manuscripts 14,461-14,465 (all 6th C); 14,471 (615 CE).

2)Complete text: Acts, James, 1 Peter and 1 John: 14,472-14,473-a (6th-7th C); frag. from MS 716 (6th C).

3) Complete text of Pauline Epistles, less Hebrews: MS 17,122 (6th C); 14,475 (6th C), 14,476, 14,480 (5th-6th C), 14,477, 14,481 (6th-7th C), 14,478 (621-622 CE), 7157 (767-768 CE).

4) Complete text of Pauline Epistles, with Hebrews: MS 14,479 (534 CE).

5) Complete texts of 2 Peter, 2 John, 3 John and Jude: 14,473-b (11th C).

6) Complete text of 2 Peter, 2 John, 3 John, Jude and Revelation: Crawford Codex (11th-12th C). [Some Western MSS are older.] In fact, Crawford is the only Aramaic manuscript that contains all 27 NT books under one cover.

Therefore, this is how we can form a complete "weaved" text from ancient sources (ca. 450 CE-ca. 1200 CE!)

So this is where the "official" manuscript record ends for the Eastern Aramaic Peshitta NT traditions. But if some of you are wondering if there is such a thing as unofficial manuscripts the answer is yes. However, first we need to take a major "off-road detour".

The Old Syriac Detour

So, having seen the "Masoretic Level", a period running from roughly 450 CE-1200 CE, the next earlier piece in the Eastern Aramaic Peshitta tradition is basically the NT equivalent to the Dead Sea Scrolls. Like the DSS, much of the Aramaic NT material from this earlier time (ca. 160 CE to 450 CE) is hidden in obscure places or fragments. And also like the DSS, these early Aramaic NT fragments shed much light on the longer, more durable traditional forms that came later. However, we can't get there directly now because there is one detour standing in the way between the Masoretic Level and the Dead Sea Scrolls Level, and that is what I call the "Old Syriac" detour. Old Syriac is actually two manuscripts. The first, Siniaticus (OS-S) was found at the traditional Mount Sinai, and is usually dated to 5th century. The second one, Curetonian (OS-C) is dated to the 6th century. Combined, these documents do not even cover the entire Gospel text, but they remain hotly debated.

The controversies over Old Syriac are almost the stuff of legend. George Lamsa, in the Introduction to his The Modern New Testament from the Aramaic, directly calls OS a fraud that he feels is 1,000 years younger than the commonly accepted date. Others seem to rejoice and feel the opposite-OS is the earliest Aramaic witness found, they say. Still others would call Old Syriac a relatively late witness—compared to the Greek text it came from—and then use it as a kind of scholarly shield. What I mean is that first Greek scholars said the Aramaic was a direct translation from the Greek. But then Aramaic scholars fought back showing differences that disproved this idea. Greek scholars then admitted they were wrong: The Eastern Aramaic could not be a direct translation from Greek, but then turned around and claimed victory anyway! They said that since OS was derived from Greek, if the Peshitta came out of OS, Peshitta didn't have to be from Greek. Or to put it in equation form IF Old Syriac came from Greek, AND Peshitta came from Old Syriac, THEN: It doesn't matter the Peshitta did not come from Greek! RESULT: There can be differences between Peshitta and Greek without the Greek losing status as "mother" text!

Critics also point out that, if the Old Syriac was the oldest Aramaic text, why was it treated so shabbily, left to rot on a shelf and then partially erased to reuse the paper? In short, I can think of no other Biblical manuscript that has more conspiracy theories attached to it! JFK's death seems less controversial! But, in the Ruach Qadim books and in the AENT, I gave many examples also about how the OS is actually showing a dependence on the Peshitta, not the other way around. I also showed evidence how OS had to be derived from Greek Codex Bezae, so I won't document that here, but please review these if needed.

Then again, if the Old Syriac is not older than Peshitta, where did it come from? Who did it and why? In 1904, a scholar named F.C. Burkitt theorized that the Old Syriac Siniaticus was translated from Greek Codex Bezae (which is true), and that a man named Rabulla revised OS into the Peshitta text (which is not true). I will be returning to this theory in detail later. For now, my focus is in explaining the fact Rabulla did not revise Old Syriac into the "later" Peshitta text, but instead the history points to Rabulla actually being the translator of the Old Syriac manuscript, known as Siniaticus.

Rabulla Wrote Old Syriac

To see why, we need to go back to the middle of the 2nd century. In about 160 CE, a man named Tatian took the Aramaic Gospel texts he knew and combined them into a single narrative called the Diatessaron. Tatian didn't compose/translate these Aramaic texts—he just edited them together. That means some original kind of text existed before Tatian did his work, and these would have been the individual Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John composed in the Aramaic language! But to find out exactly what that pre-Tatian Aramaic text was is not easy, and we will return to that point later.

In any case, because paper was expensive and Middle Eastern churches were poor, a single volume of all the Gospels was a highly prized commodity. From the last half of the 2nd to the beginning of the 5th centuries, there is no doubt Tatian's work was widely read in the Aramaic churches. Then, in 411 CE, a bishop of Edessa named Rabulla rounds up 250 copies of the Diatessaron and burns them! In 423 CE, Theodoret of Cyprus, another bishop, destroys another 200 copies of the work. Rabulla's goal was to put out a new Gospel text that supported his Gnostic heretical views by destroying the original witnesses. Rabulla then called his translation work—the one that was supposed to replace the Diatessaron—"The Separated Gospels" or "Evangelion d'Mephareshe" in Aramaic. He wrote, "The presbyters and deacons shall see to it that in all the churches a copy of the Evangelion de Mephareshe shall be available and read." (Th. Zahn, Forschungen zur Geschichte des neutestamentlichen Kanons, i. -1881, p. 105).

So Rabulla is actively destroying one text and venerating another—his own! And in the very time Rabulla did this work, matching the time OS-S was believed to have been written, some startling evidence was found! The Old Syriac (S) MSS. Says, Shlam Evangelion D'Mephareshe. Here ends the Separated Gospels. This term arises only to contrast it with the Combined Gospels in 411 CE, because originally they were separated! (Agnes Lewis, Old Syriac Gospels, p. 268).

Since Rabulla was the only person to ever author a book called "The Separated Gospels", the fact that OS-S is also the only MSS that calls itself by that title proves this must be Rabulla's work: no earlier than 411 CE. By contrast, the Peshitta was quoted from much earlier (will show soon), so it cannot be revised from OS. However, in the interests of being complete, I must also point out the term Evangelion d'Mephareshe does appear in one other MSS. But that MSS is the Curetonian Old Syriac from about 100 years later. Ironically it is Cureton, not the Peshitta, that was actually revised from OS-Siniaticus. So all that means is Cureton is simply carrying on the title of the Separated Gospels that, once again, was coined by Rabulla earlier. But Cureton does give us an interesting twist: Whereas Siniaticus uses "Separated Gospels" to indicate all 4, Cureton only uses the term to introduce Matthew! But regardless the term does not exist prior to 411 CE. And there's another problem: A Rabulla-authored Peshitta would never have been accepted by the COE any more than the Jews would accept a Torah from Adolph Hitler! The COE called Rabulla "the devil!"

Since Rabulla did do the OS, in a way Burkitt was half right, so let's look at the 2 parts of his theory. On the first point, Old Syriac coming from the Greek, this was noted by Rabulla's own assistant/biographer, "By the wisdom of God…he translated the New Testament from Greek into Syriac because of its variations, exactly as it was." (Rabul episcopi Edesseni, Baleei, aliorumque opera selecta, Oxford 1865, ed. J. J. Overbeck). But on the second point, that Peshitta was a revision of Old Syriac, it has been completely discredited. This kind of reconstruction of textual history is pure fiction without a shred of evidence to support it. (Arthur Voobus, Early Versions of the New Testament, Estonian Theological Society, 1954, pp. 90-97).

And even Dr. Bruce Metzger, a Peshitta skeptic, comes to the Peshitta's aid on this point. The question who it was that produced the Peshitta version of the New Testament will perhaps never be answered. That it was not Rabbula has been proved by Voobus' researches...In any case, however, in view of the adoption of the same version of the Scriptures by both the Eastern (Nestorian) and Western (Jacobite) branches of Syrian Christendom, we must conclude that it had attained a considerable degree of status before the division of the Syrian Church in AD 431." (The Early Versions of the NT, New York: Claredon, 1977, p. 36).

In the end, that's why I called this part "the Old Syriac detour." Neither OS-S nor OS-C is accepted as being part of the Eastern Aramaic family or even the later Western Aramaic family. And if, as we saw, it could not have been produced before 411 CE, we need to move on to more ancient Aramaic NT evidence!

The Dead Sea Scrolls Level

So maybe then we should take the word of those same churches about what Scriptures they used and when they used them! Whenever a Bible text was translated into the local vernacular of a church, written records celebrate its arrival. For the Peshitta and COE though, there is no such announcement. There is no mention of any translation of the New Testament being made into Aramaic from any language in the ten Christians Councils that took place in the Persian Empire, third and fourth centuries A.D.The Council of Seleucia (410 A.D.) makes no mention of any New Testament or the need for such a work. Why should the greatest event in the history of the Church of the East be ignored by the writers and historians in the east? (George Lamsa, The Modern New Testament from the Aramaic, p. x.). Dr. Lamsa, a native Aramaic speaker from the Middle East, asks a great question here. Why would the churches themselves not celebrate their own achievements?

Once Old Syriac is removed from contention, the course is clear: Again, it is not the case that the Peshitta "emerged" in the early 400's to replace the Diatessaron as a fresh revision. Rather, the Separated Gospels, which were and are the Peshitta text, were restored to their original form in the Aramaic speaking churches.

And this is what the sources testify to: A return to the older text! "With reference to....the originality of the Peshitta text, as the Patriarch and Head of the Holy Apostolic Church of the East, we wish to state, that the Church of the East received the scriptures from the hands of the blessed Apostles themselves in the Aramaic original, The language spoken by our Master Y'shua Mashiyach Himself, and that the Peshitta is the text of the Church of the East which has come down from the Biblical times without any change or revision." (Patriarch Mar Eshai Shimun, April 5, 1957).

So speaks the head of the COE, and he is not alone in this opinion it is known that books were soon translated from Syriac into Greek, and while such an intercourse existed it is scarcely possible to believe that the Scriptures themselves remained untranslated...which necessarily imply the existence of a Syriac Version of the Bible. Tertullian's example may show that he could hardly have refuted Marcion [died 160 CE] without the constant use of Scripture…But meanwhile there is no sufficient reason to desert the opinion that has obtained the sanction of the most competent scholars, that its formation should be fixed to the first half of the 2nd century. The text, even in its present revised form, exhibits remarkable agreement with the most ancient Greek Manuscripts and the earliest quotations from. The very obscurity that hangs over its origin is a proof of its venerable age, because it shows it grew up spontaneously in Christian congregations, and it was not the result of any public labour. Had it been a work of late date, of the 3rd or 4th century, it is scarcely possible that its history should be so uncertain as it is. (Brooke Foss Westcott, "A General Survey of the History and Canon of the New Testament" (7th Edition, 1896), p. 244-8).

Yes, THAT Westcott, as in Westcott and Hort! Here is the man most responsible for the Greek Critical NT Text and he is saying the Aramaic is at least as old as the Greek! Since the Peshitta cannot, as he says, "be the late work of the 3rd or 4th century", it must belong to 1st and 2nd centuries—before the Diatessaron! But now Westcott goes even deeper. Another circumstance serves to exhibit the venerable age of this Version. It was universally received by the different sects into which the Syrian church was divided in the 4th century, and so has continued current even to the present time. All the Syrian Christians, whether belonging to the Nestorian, Jacobite or Roman communion, conspire to hold the Peshitto authoritative and to use it in their public services. It must consequently have been established by familiar use before the first heresies arose or it could not have remained without a rival...no one ever supplanted the Peshitto for ecclesiastical purposes. (Westcott, p. 244-248).

However, to go even earlier, like the Dead Sea Scrolls, we need to do a bit of unconventional digging. Remembering the fact that the Dead Sea Scrolls were found by accident, we also need to be looking for out of the box processes on the Aramaic NT side. The fact is: Some of the earliest Aramaic NT docs are not called that! The reason is simple: These are the writings of two Aramaic saints, named Aphrahat and Ephraim, who are quoting from the Aramaic NT in their own essays. Both of these men wrote only in the Aramaic language during the 4th century and never touched the Greek. Most important of all, there is no doubt that the later manuscripts containing these men's writings (5th-6th C) are accurate renderings of their actual work. As a result, when Aphrahat dies in 345 CE, all the Aramaic NT quotes by him in manuscripts from 474 and 512 CE , must be before 345 CE.

The same is true of Saint Ephraim. His death in 373 CE guarantees that his Aramaic NT quotes must be no later than that year, if not earlier. So starting with Aphrahat, he seems to know the Peshitta NT so well that scholar William Wright said, "He seems to be quoting that text from memory." That implies the text has been around!

Some sources used for this section:

Wright, William: The Homilies of Aphraates the Persian Sage (1869). Morris, John (Reverend): S. Ephrem the Syrian, Translated out of the Original Syriac (1847). Barmby, James: A Select Library of the Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church, Volume 13 (1743). Harris, Rendel, J: Fragments of the Commentary of Ephrem Syrus upon the Diatessaron (1895). MCcarthy, Carmel: Saint Ephrem's Commentary on Tatian's Diatessaron: An English Translation of Chester Beatty Syriac MS 709 (1993).

Continuing, in more than 360 quotes in all, Aphrahat covers a massive amount of quotes of the Eastern Peshitta traditions.

Some examples:

To Joseph the angel said in Egypt: Arise, take up the child and go into the land of Israel, for they are dead who were seeking the life of the child to take it away (Matthew 2:20).

Whoever wishes to make peace, shall be one of the sons of Elohim (Matthew 5:9).

No man lights a lamp and puts in under a bushel or under a bed or puts it in a hidden place but on a lampstand that all may see the light of the lamp (Matthew 5:15, Mark 4:21, Luke 8:16).

Let us lay up our treasures in heaven (Matthew 6:20).

Let us seek His kingdom and His righteousness (Matthew 6:33).

Everyone who asks receives and everyone who seeks finds and for him who knocks it shall be opened (Matthew 7:8).

Let us found our building on a rock, that it might not be shaken by the winds and the waves (Matthew 7:24).

Speak the word and my servant will be cured (Matthew 8:8).

Freely you have received. Now freely give (Matthew 10:8).

There is nothing hidden that will not be revealed to every man (Matthew 10:26).

You shall sit on 12 thrones and judge the 12 tribes of Israel (Matthew 19:28; Luke 22:30).

And whoever falls on that stone will be broken and on everyone on whom it will fall, it will crush (Matthew 21:44).

All the pure virgins who are betrothed to Messiah shall light their lamps and with the bridegroom shall go into the marriage chamber (Matthew 25:10).

All things have been committed to me by my Father. Go forth and make disciples of all nations. And I am with you, until the end of the world (Matthew 28:18-20).

And when the chief of the synagogue requested him concerning his daughter, he said to him, "Only firmly believe and your daughter will live". So he believed and his daughter lived and arose (Mark 5:33-36).

And to him whose son was sick he said, "Believe and your son shall live." He said, "I believe, Master, help me with my weak faith" (Mark 9:22, 26).

This shall be the sign for those who believe: They shall speak with new tongues and shall cast out demons and they shall lay their hands on the sick and they shall be made whole (Mark 16:17), [Early proof of the "long ending" in Mark!]…when the Master comes he may find us awake (Luke 12:37)…or what woman is there who has 10 coins and shall lose one of them and will not light a lamp and sweep the house and seek the coin she lost? (Luke 15:8).

In the beginning there was the Word…the light was shining in the darkness and the darkness did not comprehend it (John 1:1,5).

He came to his own and his own received him not (John 1:11).

The Word became flesh and dwelled inside us (John 1:14).

Not by measure did the Father give the Spirit to the Son, but loved him and gave all into his hands (John 3:34-35).

I and my Father are One (John 10:30).

And when Lazarus died, our Master said to Martha, "If you believe, your brother will rise." Martha said to him, "Yes Master, I believe" (John 11:23-27).

He has promised: Where I am, you shall also be (John 12:26).

Walk while the light is with you, before the darkness overtakes you. Believe in the light, that you might be children of the light (John 12:35-36).

There are many rooms in my Father's house (John 14:2).

But it is true that which our Master said: "That where I go, you might be also" (John 14:3).

The Master said again, "You are in me and I am in you" (John 14:20).

This is my commandment: That you love one another (John 15:12).

If they have persecuted me, they will persecute you. And because of this they will persecute you, that you are not of the world, even as I was not of it (John 15:20,19).

Let us be strangers to the world, even as Messiah was not of it (John 17:14).

For he said to Shimon Keefa: Feed my sheep and feed my lambs and my ewes (John 21:15-17.

Not only is John 21:15-17 exactly quoting the Peshitta, the "feed my ewes" reading is not in any Greek MSS).

Death ruled from Adam to Moshe even over those who did not sin (Rom. 5:12).

You are the Temple of Elohim and the spirit of Messiah dwells within you (1 Cor. 3:16).

These three which shall abide: faith, hope and love (1 Cor. 13:13).

As to death, its sting is broken and it is swallowed up in life (1 Cor. 15:54-55).

Though we have nothing, yet possess all things (2 Cor. 6:10).

But let him who would glory, let him glory in Master YHWH (2 Cor. 10:17).

That there is neither male nor female, nor slave nor free, but you are all one in Y'shua the Messiah (Galatians 3:28).

He has taken himself up and seated us with himself in the heavens (Ephesians 2:6).

Let us love Messiah, as he loved us and gave up himself for our sakes (Ephesians 5:2).

Let us be vessels unto honor (2 Timothy 2:21).

By faith they all prevailed (Hebrews 11:33).

And there's more than 300 other quotes where those came from!

This is an incredibly ancient and important source for the Eastern text! So now it's time to wrap up this section with our other 4th century witness, Saint Ephraim. Ephraim flourished in the two decades after Aphrahat's death. Like Aphrahat, Ephraim also quotes from the Peshitta text, putting it once more as being older than 373 CE, the year that he died. Here's one more quote from Brooke Foss Westcott on this point…Ephraem Syrus, a deacon of Edessa, treats the Version in such a manner as to prove that it was already old in the 4th century. He quotes it as a book of established authority, calling it 'Our Version'; he speaks of the Translator one whose words were familiar; and though the dialects of the East are proverbially permanent, his explanations show that its language even in his time had become partially obsolete. (Brooke Foss Westcott, "A General Survey of the History and Canon of the New Testament" (7th Edition, 1896), p. 244-8).

Here are some examples:

In the wilderness John cried and said, "Repent sinners of your evil and offer fruits of repentance, for lo! He comes that winnows the wheat from the tares" (Matthew 3:8,12). The voice of the Father was heard: This is My beloved in whom I am well pleased (Matthew 3:17). Come with me, and truly I will make you fishers of men (Matthew 4:19). Let not your left hand know what your right hand is doing (Matthew 6:3). And Y'shua said, "Why are you imagining evil in your hearts" (Matthew 9:4). For (Y'shua) said that he, even Satan, is divided, himself and against himself, and that he cannot stand (Matthew 12:25-26). Forgive your brother even unto seventy times seven (Matthew 18:22). I am the Elohim of him, even of Abraham, and Elohim is not the Elohim of the dead (Matthew 22:32). Who can forgive sins except Elohim alone (Luke 5:21). Though John was great among those born from women, yet he that is now little is greater than he (Luke 7:28). This man, if he had been a prophet, he would have known this woman was a sinner (Luke 7:39). John cried, "He who comes after me, he is before me" (John 1:30). The woman of Samaria said to our Master: Behold, the well is deep (John 4:11). He who drinks of the water I will give him, truly, he will never thirst again (John 4:14). Arise, take up your bed and go home (John 5:8). Abraham perceived in Spirit that the Son's birth was far off; instead of him in person he rejoiced to see even his day (John 8:56). That it might be fulfilled that all things be subjected to him. Then he, in his turn, shall be subjected to him who subjected all things to him (1 Cor 15:27-28).

As important as Ephraim's quotes are here, the fact that Aphrahat is the earlier source and quotes far more from Peshitta—and from a time before Rabulla did OS—is what really counts! Nevertheless, I believe, the more ancient witnesses the better!

The Lost Gospels!

I want all of you to know that I really went back and forth on whether using the milk carton motif was a good idea or not. Obviously, in no way do I wish to make fun of missing kids or the evil behind their disappearances. Yah forbid it! But it was also the only way I could think of to show a different kind of crime—a disappearance that affects all! It is perhaps the most vexing question we get in the Aramaic NT movement. We know Messiah was a Hebrew speaking Jew, as were all his disciples and nearly all the writers of the NT. So where are their Hebrew writings—the same Sacred Writ as the Tanakh no less? Well for a long time, I felt this question was not adequately answered, and I count myself as guilty of that as the next man. In the past the Aramaic guy would act like a mean cop on a bad "Law and Order" episode, and he would say something like, "Look they're just gone okay? Deal with it and move on! " Then the questioner, in this case I imagine a widow in mourning, cries and says, "But what about Shem Tov? What about Dutillet? I thought for sure they were good Hebrew witnesses." The cop answers, "Look lady, I'm real sorry, but you've been lied to. Happens every day in this city. They're gone and not coming back! " Now granted, I am exaggerating for dramatic effect here, but not by much! The problem is, that while we know manuscripts at least in Hebrew letters circulated very early, not a trace of the the early copies has survived. And the witnesses we do have come 1000 years later and only cover Matthew and Hebrews-what about the rest?

That is why, for even the most ardent advocates of the "Hebrew NT", their efforts will fall short in producing one. They will either turn to the Aramaic for the rest of the books or try to "reconstruct lost Hebrew ideas" from the Greek. I think you all know which option I took, except my Matthew is also in Aramaic. However, I believe I have uncovered new evidence that can shed fresh light on this issue. What I did was I went back and read the testimony of the Church Fathers with fresh eyes. I tried to see things from their view and looked at the different terms they used and the political circumstances they were in. After compiling a list of these factors, I went back to the manuscript and historical record to see what other concordances I could find…and this led to the answer I currently have about the Hebrew NT.

What we are going to see are the birth to two extremely ancient Semitic witnesses. The first witness, I'll call it "Jerusalem Witness", was a tradition that arose in Israel, partly in Hebrew at first, but then quickly adapted into Judean Aramaic in Hebrew letters. The second witness, called "Babylon Witness", was done in the Eastern Aramaic dialect of Edessa, which spread throughout the Middle East.

The Jerusalem Witness

Our current studies have brought the Eastern Aramaic witnesses down to about the year 300 CE, in large degree due to Saint Aphrahat's clear reliance on that text. But to go back further, we need to rely on the testimony of Eusebius, a 4th century historian who was also Constantine's biographer. At the Emperor's behest, Eusebius compiled a massive volume called simply "Ecclesiastical History", in which he detailed all the major events of the Western Church. Eusebius was in a unique position. He had access to the most ancient manuscripts and official imperial backing and unlimited resources.

Now one might rightly ask however: Given Eusebius' patron, can we trust what he says about history? Isn't that history going to have a western bias? Well to be sure a lot of it is biased, but surprisingly, when it came to explaining the Hebrew and Aramaic stuff they had, they turned honest! I pondered this mystery for many years: Why would Constantine who hated everything Jewish admit in his official bio that his church had original "Hebrew" MSS of the NT? We would expect that everything Eusebius wrote would be only about original Greek or perhaps Latin texts—not Hebrew and Aramaic texts. But then I remembered something important. Eusebius also tells us that Constantine ordered all his bishops to agree to a final list of NT books so that he could put out 50 hand-made Bibles for his churches. In spite of the fact those churches continued debating canon for a long time after, that Bible got done.

So my opinion is this: Constantine knew there was a very vibrant underground Hebrew and Aramaic movement that he couldn't totally stamp out. He also knew, or was informed, that early Hebrew and Aramaic MSS had circulated early, and he had a lot of them in his library. If Constantine simply denied their existence, he would look like a fool. But if he told the truth, it could work to his advantage, as he could truthfully say he had access to ALL the important ancient witnesses that he could "consult" for his Bible. And so Eusebius, with the documents in hand, is given the green light to talk.

So, not only are the political and logistical considerations properly aligned, we need to remember another important factor. The events Eusebius records are only between 50-300 years in his past, so the documents he has to compile this history are very close to the time it all happened. That is an extremely rare convergence that leads me to trust Eusebius! Oh and there is one more thing about Eusebius that I should mention. He was born in Israel! He is sometimes called "Eusebius of Palestine" or "Eusebius of Caesarea". He also became an early bishop in Israel and therefore knows exactly what documents they have as well as what his master Constantine has. But in order to reveal these two ancient and original Semitic strands, we need to shift gears a bit. Up until now, we have been telling our story in descending order, that is, from the most recent events on down to the more ancient. Now we need to reverse the process and go ascending, ancient to modern.

The Jerusalem Witness begins in 30 CE, the year that Y'shua was crucified and risen from the dead…And afterwards they returned to Urishlim from the mountain, which is called Of the House of Olives, which is on the side of Urishlim and distant from it seven furlongs. And after they entered, they went up into an upper room. (Those) that were staying in (her): Petros, and Yochanan, and Ya'akov, and Andraus, and Peleepos, and Tooma, and Mattai, and Bar-Tulmay, and Ya'akov Bar-Khalpai, and Shimon the zealot, and Yehud Bar-Ya'akov. These, all of them, were steadfast in prayer with one soul, and (with) the women with Maryam, (his) mother of Y'shua, and with his Brothers. And among them in those days arose Shimon Keefa in the midst of the disciples there. Now there was a gathering of men, about 120. (Acts 1:12-15-AENT). So here we see the first "corporate meeting" after Y'shua's resurrection, and it's obvious the "minutes" from that meeting were written down!

We also see agendas put forward, special Scripture discussions to justify actions, and a collective decision making process based on the falling of lots. Look at also who is at this meeting to give testimony: All the apostles, Y'shua's mother and two brothers and any number of other important witnesses! I believe this first gathering was also intended to begin collecting testimony from all the eyewitnesses about Y'shua and what had just happened. I base my belief on this matter from two rulings Y'shua gave at the end of his time on earth. The first of these concerned the fate of the apostles. "And there will be severe earthquakes from place to place and famine and plagues. But before these things, they will lay hands upon you and persecute you. And they will deliver you to the assemblies and to the prisons. And they will bring you before kings and governors because of my name. But it will be to you for a testimony. But place it in your hearts that you should not try to learn how to answer. For I will give you a mouth and wisdom so that all your enemies will not be able to stand against it. And your parents and your brothers and your relatives and your friends will betray you. And they will kill some of you. Then you will be hated by all men because of my name." (Luke 21:11-17-AENT).

Even Y'shua's designated successor, Peter, was given a premonition of a violent death (John 21:18-19-AENT). And yet, in spite of the fact that many of the apostles—as it turned out, 11 of them—would die violently, they were still given this command…"Go therefore, make disciples of all nations and immerse them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Ruach haKodesh. And teach them to keep all that I have commanded you. And behold, I am with you all the days until the end of the world." Amen. (Matthew 28:19-20-AENT).

So let's put the pieces together: On the one hand, the apostles are commanded to teach the rest of the world all about Y'shua and Torah. But on the other hand, they need to watch their backs and understand they might die at any time while they are fulfilling this charge. That is why this next Scripture, if I'm them, would give me chills. "But beware in yourselves that your hearts never become heavy by extravagance and by drunkenness and by distress of the world, and that day should come suddenly upon you. For like a snare it will entrap all those who dwell upon the face of all the earth. Therefore, be watchful at all times and pray that you are worthy to escape from these things that are about to happen, and that you stand before the Son of man." (Luke 21:34-36-AENT).

With marching orders like these, the apostles have to make sure that, even if they are stopped by hardship or death, their message is not. And as if all this isn't bad enough, their enemies have their versions of events out already! "Now when they had departed, some men came from those soldiers to the city and told the chief priests everything that happened. And they were assembled with the elders and they took counsel and they gave not a small amount of money to the soldiers." And they said to them, "Say that his disciples came and stole him in the middle of the night while we were sleeping." "And if this is heard before the governor, we will persuade him to not make trouble for you...And this word has gone out among the Yehudeans to this day." (Matthew 28:11-15-AENT).

So, if they don't write their account down, the apostles knew for certain their enemies would (and did)! This then is the birth of the "Jerusalem Archive", where these witnesses give testimony that goes into an official Hebrew corpus for believers to draw on and consult for proper facts. And the people who needed this Archive would have been folks like Luke who, getting part of the story from Paul, interviewed eyewitnesses.

Matthew and John would both have had access to Y'shua's mom Maryam, and brothers, Matthew because they were both in Jerusalem at the same time (Acts 1:13-14) and John because he lived with her (John 19:27). Mark, as we will see from very ancient and reliable tradition, got his information from Peter, and so on. And so what I believed happened was that the initial focus of the Jerusalem Archive was to collect enough information on Y'shua to write an official biography that we call the Gospel of Matthew! Other Gospels would follow, and I believe they had to be in Hebrew or Aramaic, given the accounts were for Israel. It is certainly the case that, when the other leaders like Paul and Ya'akov quote from a source, it's always something that can be found in Matthew! Granted, there may be very similar statements in Mark and Luke also, but tradition is unanimous that in these early years, there was only Matthew.

Such as:

For I delivered to you from the first, as I had received it; that the Mashiyach died on account of our sins, as it is written (Matthew 26:28): And that he was buried and arose on the third day, as it is written (Matthew 28:1-6). (1 Corinthians 15:3-5 -AENT)

For I have received from our Master, that which I delivered to you; that our Master Y'shua, on the night he was betrayed, took bread, And blessed, and broke (it), and said: "Take, eat; this is my body which is broken for your sakes: do this, in remembrance of me." (Matthew 26:27) So, after they had dined, he gave also the cup and said: "This cup is the renewed covenant in my blood: do this as often as you drink (it), in remembrance of me." (Matthew 26:28). (1 Corinthians 11:23-25 -AENT)

Do not swear; neither "by heaven" nor "by the earth" nor by any other oath: but let your language be "yes, yes," and "no, no," (Matthew 5:37) "or else you become subject to judgment." (Ya'akov 5:12 -AENT).

What's very interesting also is that Paul is dead by 67 and Ya'akov is dead even earlier, in the year 62—and yet they are quoting from a written source! We also need to look at another fact about the Jerusalem Archive: The NT clearly tells us that the apostles put their administrative rulings in writing!

For example:

Now those who were sent came to Antikia and gathered all the people and they delivered the epistle. And after they read they were encouraged and they rejoiced. And with an abundant word strengthened the Brothers and established those of the household of Yehuda and Shila. (Acts 15:30-32 AENT). And they who accompanied Paul, went with him to the city of Athens. And when they departed from him, they received an epistle from him to Silas and Timothy, that they should come to him speedily. (Acts 17:15 AENT). Be established and persevere in the Commandments…whether by word or by our epistle. (2 Thess. 2:15 AENT).

So, official biographies of Y'shua (Gospels), letters to assemblies abroad, and details of administrative matters were all written down and kept in the Jerusalem Archive. Then out of this archive, no later than about 45 CE, emerges the first official book, the Gospel of Matthew. My source for this may be surprising…St. Jerome was, quite simply, the greatest scholar the Roman Catholic Church ever produced. Jerome also was a very brave man, defying Church dogma by venerating Hebrew over Greek. And yet, so great was his scholarship, the pope had to admit no one else was qualified to create the Vulgate. Like Eusebius before him, Jerome was commissioned by Roman rulers to create a Bible—this time in Latin. And also like Eusebius, Jerome was given unlimited access to precious manuscripts along with all the funding he would ever need to complete the project.

So here is what this expert had to say:

"Matthew, who is also Levi, and from a tax collector came to be an emissary first of all evangelists composed a Gospel of Messiah in Judea in the Hebrew language and letters, for the benefit of those of the circumcision who had believed. Who translated it into Greek is not sufficiently ascertained. Furthermore, the Hebrew itself is preserved to this day in the library at Caesarea, which the martyr Pamphilus so diligently collected. I also was allowed by the Nazarenes who use this volume in the Syrian city of Borea to copy it. In which it is to be remarked that, wherever the evangelist…makes use of the testimonies of the Old Scripture, he does not follow the authority of the seventy translators [a.k.a. the Septuagint] but that of the Hebrew." Jerome (382 CE).

So, here we see an interesting toggling point. The first place, Caesarea, it is most likely Matthew was in Hebrew, but in Syria Aramaic dominated! So once again, we see two forms of the Jerusalem Witness. The first one, the Jerusalem Archive, is purely in Hebrew language and letters. As apostles like Matthew and John meet in Jerusalem, they use the Archive and their own testimonies to form their Gospels. I believe Matthew's Gospel was written in purely the Hebrew language and letters, but Matthew also was fluent in Aramaic and did a version in that language as well. In sifting through the early records of Jerome, Eusebius and other Western writers who basically stole what the Nazarenes had, we find an important distinction…The first is written according to Matthew, the same that was once a tax collector, but afterwards an emissary of Y'shua the Messiah, who having published it for his believers, wrote it in Hebrew. Origen (ca. 200 CE).

Matthew also issued a written Gospel among the Hebrews in their own dialect. Irenaeus (170 CE). So with Origen, he just says Matthew "wrote it in Hebrew", and the most natural assumption is this means "Hebrew language and letters." But with Irenaus, he introduces the phrase, dialektos Hebraidi, and this is where it gets interesting: Wouldn't the Hebrew people speak a Hebrew dialect? Why even say that? To me, and to the majority of scholars I have read on the issue, the answer is clear: The "Hebrew dialect" is the dialect of Aramaic that happens to be spoken by the Hebrew people whereas "wrote in Hebrew" means pure Hebrew! And by the way, this Hebrew dialect doesn't just apply to Matthew alone.

In the work called Hypotyposes, to sum up the matter briefly, he [Clement of Alexandria] has given us abridged accounts of all the canonical Scriptures…The Epistle to the Hebrews he asserts was written by Paul, to the Hebrews, in the Hebrew tongue, but that it was carefully translated by Luke, and published among the Greeks.- Eusebius on Clement of Alexandria (ca. 185 CE).

And Eusebius also says:

Pantaneus...penetrated as far as India, where it is reported that he found the Gospel according to Matthew, which had been delivered before his arrival by some who had the knowledge of Messiah, to whom Bartholomew [Nathaniel Bar Tulmay], one of the emissaries, as it is said, had proclaimed, and left them the writing of Matthew in Hebrew letters. For as Paul had addressed the Hebrews in the language of his country; some say that the evangelist Luke, others that Clement, translated the Epistle. And the year that Nathanael Bar Tulmay had this Gospel of Matthew in Hebrew letters in India: 52 CE. And so in this case of Thomas and Nathanael going to India in 52 CE, the term "in Hebrew letters" means pure Hebrew also. Reason being, the whole point of both Greek and Aramaic versions of the NT was to get the word out about Y'shua in the languages of the local people, but Indians spoke neither Greek nor Aramaic.

Also it is important to note that the Scriptures were not translated into Sanskrit or Hindi until much later, in part because the assembly Thomas founded never changed their Aramaic liturgy! So I believe the Hebrew Gospels they had were very early put into Aramaic—and done by the apostles. But if I'm part of the Jerusalem leadership, and a place I want to preach the Good News to does not speak Greek or Aramaic (at least, not at first), my next best alternative would be to spread the original language of those Gospels, and my native tongue: Hebrew. But the apostles also wrote Aramaic liturgy which still exists!

One final link between the St. Thomas Messianic's and the Jerusalem Witness. The St. Thomas Christians have another name they call themselves, The Nazrani (Nazarenes)! As such, they have retained many elements of their Jewish origins. They are the only Christian sect in the world that calls their cross a menorah! But even more evidence of this Hebrew Matthew may have been preserved by Rabbi Gamaliel, Paul's teacher! In an essay written for the book Passover and Easter: Origin and History to Modern Times, Israel J. Yuval reported a find in the Talmud that appears to show Matthew could have been written earlier than some scholars contend. Yuval wrote that a leading rabbinical scholar of the time was, "considered to have authored a sophisticated parody of the Gospel according to Matthew." The parody was written by a rabbi known as Gamaliel, is believed by some well-respected liberal Christian scholars to have been written about A.D. 73 or earlier. Neal Altman, Support for Authenticity of the Book of Matthew Comes from an Unlikely Place, Kansas City Star, January 7th, 2004. Please note that 73 CE is the latest possible date for the parody—and therefore the Gospel that inspired it—because Rabbi Gamaliel died that year. Matthew must have circulated earlier! Furthermore, for Gamaliel to read Matthew and view it worthy of parody, it must be the case the Gospel was well known for quite some time before the time Gamaliel would have used it. And the fact that all this took place in Israel strongly suggests the Gospel and the parody were written in the Hebrew language and Hebrew letters.

This brings us to our last reference for the Jerusalem Witness: The Talmud. The books of the Evangelists and the books of the minim they do not save from a fire [on the Sabbath]. They are allowed to burn up where they are, they and [even] the references to the Divine Name that are in them.-Rabbi Tarfon, Mas Shabbath,13:5 [Neusner translation]. Come and hear: The blank spaces above and below, between the sections, between the columns, at the beginning and at the end of the Scroll, defile one's hands. — It may be that [when they are] together with the Scroll of the Law they are different. Now surely it means the blank portions of a Scroll of the Law? No: the blank spaces in the "Books of Minim". Seeing that we may not save the Books of Minim themselves, need their blank spaces be stated? — This is its meaning: And the Books of Minim are like blank spaces. Spaces and the Books of the Minim may not be saved from a fire, but they must be burnt in their place, they and the Divine Names occurring in them.

R. Tarfon said: May I bury my son if I would not burn them together with their Divine Names if they came to my hand…I would enter a heathen Temple [for refuge], but not their houses (Mas Shabbath 116a) The "books of the Minim", plural for MYN, refer to Jewish believers in Y'shua, derived from Mahaymna Y'shua Netzeret. A very strong clue that the "books of the Minim" were in Hebrew is the rabbinic concern about "the Divine Names occurring in them." No Aramaic names for Deity (MarYAH, Eloah, etc.) would have raised concern for preserving the MSS of their enemies. But the original Name of Yahweh would have!

And the Jewish Encyclopedia says this about Tarfon…R. Ṭarfon was extremely bitter against those Jews who had been converted to the new faith; and he swore that he would burn every book of theirs which should fall into his hands (Shab. 116a), his feeling being so intense that he had no scruples against destroying the Gospels, although the name of God occurred frequently in them. So not just Matthew in Hebrew was targeted, but all four Gospels were in that language at that time! But on the other hand, we know these manuscripts could not have been in Greek because Greek NT documents do NOT have the Name! And while Aramaic could certainly have been read by the rabbis in Mas Shabbath 116a, Aramaic did not employ the use of the long form "Yahweh" in any of its documents either, preferring MarYAH instead. This leads to the conclusion that Nazarene Gospels in Hebrew circulated widely in Israel early 2nd century. Furthermore, the identity of the "heretical" sect is confirmed here…R. Joseph b. Hanin asked R. Abbahu: As for the Books of Be Abedan [Ebionites], may we save them from a fire or not? — Yes and No, and he was uncertain about the matter. Rab would not enter a Be Abedan, and certainly not a Be Nizrefe [Nazarene house]; Samuel would not enter a Be Nizrefe, yet he would enter a Be Abedan.

It is also important to note that, based on the names of the rabbis listed in this Talmud passage (e.g. Tarfon), we can date the historical event recorded in it to about 125 CE! This date is also consistent with what other sources tell us about this time. But I have learned this much from writings, that until the siege of the Jews, which took place under Adrian [Bar Kochba Revolt, 135 CE—AGR], there were 15 bishops in succession there, all of whom are said to have been of Hebrew descent, and to have received the knowledge of Messiah in purity, so that they were approved by those who were able to judge of such matters, and were deemed worthy of the episcopate. For their whole assembly consisted then of believing Hebrews who continued from the days of the apostles until the siege which took place at this time; in which siege the Jews, having again rebelled against the Romans, were conquered after severe battles.

Since the bishops of the circumcision ceased at this time, it is proper to give here a list of their names from the beginning. The 1st, then, was James, the so-called brother of the Lord; the 2nd, Symeon; the 3rd, Justus; the 4th, Zacchaeus; the 5th, Tobias; the 6th, Benjamin; the 7th, John; the 8th, Matthias; the 9th, Philip; the 10th, Seneca; the 11th, Justus; the 12th, Levi; the 13th, Ephres; the 14th, Joseph; and finally, the 15th, Judas. These are the bishops of Jerusalem that lived between the age of the apostles and the time referred to, all of them belonging to the circumcision. (Eusebius, Church History, Book IV, 2-4, 315 CE).

Therefore, these Jerusalem leaders would probably have also maintained the same Hebrew documents Rabbis like Gamaliel saw before 73 CE and Tarfon and Akiba (Mas Shabbath 116a) saw around 125 CE. But after this time, a disaster known as the Bar Kochba Revolt would soon change everything for this witness! After the disaster of Bar Kochba, the Jews were expelled from Israel and even Jewish Messianics lost their positions in Jerusalem. Many fled for their lives, and if COE documents are accurate, even members of Y'shua's own family joined them in the Persian Empire, because Persia was more tolerant. But from this point on, details about the Hebrew NT become sketchy at best. For a few centuries after this, Church fathers like Eusebius and Jerome will report that they saw copies of at least a Hebrew Gospel of Matthew. One other writer, Epiphanus, makes this interesting comment..."They (the Nazarenes) have the Gospel according to Matthew quite complete in Hebrew, for this Gospel is certainly still preserved among them as it was first written, in Hebrew letters." (Epiphanus - ca. 370 CE).

The phrase, "quite complete in Hebrew" is very important for our studies and purposes. For one thing, it strongly suggests that the Hebrew versions of the Gospels with the Nazarenes were "complete", i.e. were very similar to the Greek and Aramaic manuscripts Epiphanus himself knew. These were not fragments or spurious texts from heretics like the Gnostics...they were Received Text! And so this gives me great hope—if not final proof—that the Hebrew Gospels Rabbi Gamaliel and Rabbi Tarfon saw were close to "mirror images" to the Aramaic counterparts that survived, except that the Hebrew read "YHWH" and the Aramaic read "MarYAH." After all, one thing the Church Fathers were good at was recording "heresies!"

So here is the summary chart:

Apostles meet in 30 CE...Testimonies form the Hebrew-only Jerusalem Archive...Using the Archive, the first Gospels are written in Hebrew and Aramaic-40's CE...Gospel of Matthew makes its way to India in 52 CE...Gospel of Matthew is also parodied by Rabbi Gamaliel, who dies in 73 CE...The Archive is likely destroyed in 70 CE, when the Romans burn Jerusalem...Nazarene Gospels with "YHWH" in them are burned by rabbis in 125 CE...Bar Kochba Revolt in 135 CE causes complete banishment of Jews from Israel...Hebrew and Aramaic NT books brought to Rome, ca. 150 CE.

The Babylon Witness

The elect assembly which is in Babylon, sends peace to you; also Mark, my son. (1 Peter 5:13 AENT). This is not a coded reference for Rome, but a literal one for Babylon in Iraq. In fact, the assembly Peter is writing from still exists. The NT tells us that Peter spent many years in the Jerusalem area, but also travelled to Samaria (Acts 8:9-25), Syrian Antioch (Galatians 2:11) and other Aramaic speaking places (Acts 9:32-38). But Peter continued returning to his base in Jerusalem, even though by this time Ya'akov was in charge there. In 49 CE, Peter and Ya'akov held the famous Circumcision Council meeting in Jerusalem, and this occasion was also an important moment for the Jerusalem Archive, as we will soon see. But after this, Peter largely drops out of the picture in Acts, and this is the likely time he goes to Babylon (50-65).

Once there, he establishes an assembly that will later become known as the Church of the East. Another assembly that Peter founded, in Syrian Antioch, becomes the Syrian Orthodox Church. In all Peter founded almost twice the assemblies that Paul did and travelled further and longer than Paul did. With Peter then in Babylon, the largest Jewish population outside of Israel, we can see how Aramaic documents would be sent to and approved by him, and also sent back to Israel for Ya'akov's use as well. And it is once again at the Circumcision Council in 49 CE that we are given details on this set up...And they wrote an epistle by their hands thus: "The Shlichim and the Elders and the Brothers to those who are in Antioch and in Syria and in Cilicia. Brothers who are from the Gentiles, peace. We have heard that some men from us went out and confused you with words and have agitated your souls, saying that, You should be circumcised and guard the religious customs, something that we did not command them. Because of this, we deliberated, all of us, after we gathered together and we chose men and sent them to you with our beloved Paul and Bar-Naba, men who have committed their souls for the sake of the Name of our Master Y'shua the Mashiyach. And we sent Yehuda and Shila with them who by their words they will tell you these things. For there was a determination upon the Ruach haKodesh and also upon us that a greater burden should not be placed upon you except those things that are necessary. That you should stay away from that which is sacrificed (to idols) and from blood and from a strangled thing and from fornication that as you keep your souls from these things you will be well. Be true in our Master (Y'shua)." (Acts 15:23-29 AENT).

So the key thing to observe are the men delivering the message: Paul, Bar-Naba, Yehudah and Shila. The apostle Paul is travelling with a translating entourage! The translating "Dream Team" helping Rav Shaul were…

1)Yosef Ha-Levi Bar-Naba [see Acts 4:36], specifically sent to help Paul when it was decided he minister to Gentiles (Galatians 2:9).

2)Yehudah Bar-Shaba, sent with Paul and the others to deliver the circumcision ruling to Gentiles.

3) Shila, also known as Silas (Greek) and Sylvanus (Latin): Fluent writer in both Aramaic and Greek, Shila is one of the most well-travelled translators Paul has. He is with Paul in both synagogues (Acts 15:40) and in Greek speaking areas (Acts 17:15).

And here's another special note about Shila-Silas-Sylvanus: He co-authors two of Paul's letters in Greek! "I PAUL and Sylvanus and Timothy, to the assembly of the Thessalonians which is in Elohim the Father and in our Master Y'shua the Mashiyach: Grace be with you, and peace." (1Thessalonians 1:1 AENT).

And…PAUL and Sylvanus and Timothy, to the assembly of the Thessalonians, which is in Elohim our Father and our Master Y'shua the Mashiyach. (2 Thessalonians 1:1 AENT). Nor is this the only apostle that Sylvanus helps with writing from Aramaic to Greek, as this testimony shows…These as I account (them) few (things), I have written to you by Sylvanus, a faithful brother. And I would persuade and would testify that this is the true Grace of Elohim, this in which you stand. (1 Peter 5:10-12 AENT).

And, as time goes on, Paul will also have other translators help him as well…Yochanan-Marqos, author of the 2nd Gospel and assistant also to Peter (Acts 12:25; 1 Peter 5:13). Tertius, the co-writer and scribe of the Epistle to the Romans in Greek (Romans 16:22). Timothy, co-writer along with Shila of 1 and 2 Thessalonians in Greek (1 Thessalonians 1:1; 2 Thessalonians 1:1).

And of course, the most stalwart servant of them all…Luke, author of the 3rd Gospel, the book of Acts and probably had a major hand in helping put the Epistle to the Hebrews into Greek, according to ancient traditions. As Paul laments near the end of his life, "Only Luke is with me" (2 Tim. 4:11). This entourage of translators and sometimes couriers, along with others like Onessimus, Epaphroditus and many more after them, formed a network of scribes who helped the apostles take Aramaic epistles and put them into Greek. The most likely path: Greek letters went to Greek assemblies and Aramaic went to Jerusalem.

Of course, Aramaic letters also went to places where large Aramaic speaking populations existed, such as Syria, Babylon, and certain parts of Asia Minor. And that is why I have learned that "primacy" is not so much about "who came first" but "what was needed where!" In other words, if I am a worshipper at the Thessaly assembly and my rabbi receives 1 Thessalonians which was originally authored by Paul in Aramaic, but helped by Shila to be put carefully into Greek under Paul's guidance, then in that sense our Greek copy is "original" as the autograph we got…but so is the Aramaic it was derived from!

So, in a sense, primacy or originality resides in the mind of the writer and the receiver, and they may not have the same conclusions! But now we need to shift gears and get back to Peter. After two decades and establishing more than 40 assemblies in the Middle East, Peter decided to retire. But what may be shocking is, in spite of Catholic doctrine to the contrary, there is no evidence whatsoever that Peter ever set foot in Rome!

In fact, recent archaeology has revealed the distinct possibility that Peter returned to Jerusalem from the greater Middle East and died there around 66 CE. Rome's attitude on this matter might be viewed as almost humorous if it wasn't also so tragic. The fact is, the Roman Church only claims to be "Babylon" when its convenient, like in co-opting 1 Peter 5:13, but point out that the Whore of Babylon sits on 7 hills (Revelation 17:9) and we hear "That's not us! "

I believe what happened to Peter in his final years is that he returned back home to Jerusalem in the wake of Ya'akov's death in 62 CE. He would then die around 66 CE, perishing in the chaos of the First Jewish Revolt. But before that, the Church Fathers hint that Peter may have resumed power in Jerusalem. Recall that earlier I showed you Eusebius' list of bishops that ran Jerusalem. After Ya'akov died, he was immediately succeeded by a man named "Symeon", which is nothing more than a Greek rendering of "Shimon", Peter's birth name. But there is also a catch…The ancient sources all call this second bishop "Shimon, the son of Clopas", not "Shimon son of Jonah." Many scholars think "Clopas" is "Alphaeus", the father of Matthew (Matthew 10:3). But "Clopas" (actually Qeylopa), the scholars also agree, is an Aramaic name, not a Greek one. Qeylopa, in turn, is the Aramaic cognate for Khalpai, a Hebrew name that means "changing."

Is it possible this is another kind of nickname for Shimon Keefa, the Rock, who changed from denying Messiah to becoming his successor? While there is no way to know, deriving authority from Peter as pope is a powerful motive to lie. But at the end of the day, Peter as Shimon the "Second Bishop of Jerusalem", may be something I believe, but I cannot prove it true. If Peter did return at the time the evidence suggests however, he certainly would have been recognized as the leader, regardless as to what Eusebius says. Moving on, the next stop in our journey of the Babylon Witness is a copy of the Four Gospels with a very early date attached to it. In 1821, the Vatican Librarian made an amazing announcement that went all around the planet. His name was J.D. Asseman, and he may have leaked a shocking secret! A manuscript of the four Gospels in Syriac, bearing the date A.D. 78, is mentioned by J. S. Asseman, in his Bibliotheca. The manuscript was preserved at Baghdad on the river Tigris; at the end it had these words under written; "This sacred book was finished on Wednesday, the 18th day of the month Conun, in the year 389," that is of the Greeks, which was A. D. 78, "by the hand of the Apostle Achaeus, a fellow laborer of Mar Maris, and a disciple of the Apostle Mar Thaddeus." (Marsh's Michaelis, 1823, vol. ii., pg. 31). But no sooner was the discovery leaked which could have led to much scrutiny against Rome when other scholars closed ranks and renounced it.

I find both the level of "quashing" the story and the reasons given for invalidating it highly tenuous and suspicious. Michaelis was said to have rejected the statement on the grounds that one of the "laborers" mentioned (Achaeus), died in the year 48 CE, but this is by no means certain based on the evidence. Michaelis' analysis also ignores the fact that the other man mentioned, Mar Maris, was definitely still alive in 78 CE! In fact, in 78 CE, Mar Maris was a powerful bishop who would, only a decade later, becomes the Patriarch of the Church of the East. Achaeus, or Aggai as he was also called, was believed to have been Maris' teacher. So the colophon reading that Asseman reported is probably perfectly accurate after all. Achaeus and Mar Maris were co-laborers for a time, but the student overtook his teacher and became the next leader of the Church of the East. So once this objection is eliminated, the leading expert is vindicated! Therefore, this is one of many invaluable artifacts we know Rome is hiding.

While I cannot know if this MSS still exists—it would reside in the "restricted 1st century section", that we know the Vatican Library has—I have no doubt that the Vatican Librarian knew what he was talking about in 1821, and Aramaic Gospels from 78 CE did exist! But our next stop comes from a disciple of the Apostle John. His name is Papias, and he died in the year 130 CE. Remarkably, both Papias' own fragments as well as a fuller account given by Eusebius have survived into modern times. Let's look at what this ancient witness has to say…And the presbyter said this…Mark having become the interpreter of Peter, wrote down accurately whatsoever he remembered.

It was not, however, in exact order that he related the sayings or deeds of Messiah. For he neither heard the Master nor accompanied Him. But afterwards, as I said, he accompanied Peter, who accommodated his instructions to the necessities [of his hearers], but with no intention of giving a regular narrative of the Lord's sayings…but with regard to Matthew he has made the following statements: Matthew put together the oracles [of the Master] in the Hebrew language, and each one interpreted them as best he could. The same person uses proofs from the First Epistle of John, and from the Epistle of Peter in like manner.-Phillip Schaaf, Nicene and Post Nicene Fathers, (New York: The Christian Literature Publishing Company, 1887-1894, p. 154).

Again the term Papias uses, Hebrew dialect, shows the Gospels are in Hebrew letters and Aramaic language. Also see Irenaus, Against Heresies, V, 36 (180 CE), but Papias' 130 CE testimony sets up the next phase! In about 150 CE, a Jewish scholar named Hegisippius converts to Christianity. Hegisippius also saw the Nazarene Canon in Jerusalem (both Hebrew and Aramaic versions, as we will soon see), and took it back to Rome. And on this point, our ancient chronicler Eusebius says this…And he wrote of many other matters, which we have in part already mentioned, introducing the accounts in their appropriate places. And from the Syriac Gospel according to the Hebrews he quotes some passages in the Hebrew tongue, showing that he was a convert from the Hebrews, and he mentions other matters as taken from the unwritten tradition [Talmud] of the Jews. Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History, 4.22.1-7. But the use of the term Syriac Gospel according to the Hebrews is highly significant, because it also contrasted with "sayings from the Hebrew", and so both versions are in with Hegisippius as he draws near Rome.

Meanwhile, at that same time, these same "Syriac Gospels" are widely copied and spread throughout the Middle East. And only 10 years after Hegisippius takes some of them out of Israel, a man named Tatian gets a hold of other copies in Syria and begins piecing them into the Diatessaron. From there, the wildly popular Diatessaron becomes the majority document for the Aramaic NT throughout the Middle East (175 CE). But the Peshitta didn't disappear, as the quotes from Saint Aphrahat prove. He had plenty of "Separated Gospels", to quote from in the early 300's.

However, even so, the "Combined Gospels" MSS greatly outnumbered the Peshitta documents…we get some indication of these numbers when Rabulla and another bishop destroy 450 copies of the former! But when the dust settled, it was very easy for the COE to put the old Separated Gospel MSS back into use. That maneuver, to simply go back to the previous form of the documents as separate Gospels, explains further the traditions that the COE never asked for, needed, or received a "new" translation at any point in the 2nd to 5th centuries CE. And then the time of the Peshitta's re-emergence matches the MSS record perfectly: Early 5th century!

So here is this summary chart now:

Apostles meet in 30 CE…Testimonies form the Hebrew-only Jerusalem Archive…Using the Archive, the first Gospels are written in Hebrew and Aramaic-40's CE…The Babylon Witness Aramaic versions of the Gospels, dated to 78 CE, are attested to by the Vatican Librarian Papias (130 CE): Matthew was written in Aramaic before being put into Greek. Hegisippius takes the Nazarene Canon back to Rome (ca. 150 CE). Church Father Origen quotes from Peshitta-exclusive version of Hebrews 2:9 in 202 CE—didn't talk about that yet did I? Pause timeline!

The original reading for Hebrews 2:9 was, as is shown in the Eastern Peshitta text, "for apart from Elohim he tasted death for every man." However, a heresy called Monophysitism became a fad. Monophysitism means "one nature", and it arises from Gnosticism which held that Y'shua was not human at all but merely a divine being putting on the appearance of a mortal. This heresy spread all over, and soon a new reading emerged to accommodate it: "So that by the grace of God He might taste death for everyone."

Sounds subtle, even innocuous, but the problem was not "God's grace" being added. Instead, the issue was "apart from Elohim", was dropped! The heretics didn't want Y'shua to have any humanity whatsoever, even if he was also 100% divine at the same time! But for our purposes, here's the major point: The reading "apart from Elohim", did not exist in any Greek manuscript in Origen's time. The only place he could have gotten it is from the Peshitta! In fact, it will take another 200 years for "apart from Elohim", to show up on the Greek side at all, and then rarely!

Here's the quote...For 'apart from God he tasted death for all.' This appears in some copies of the Epistle to the Hebrews as 'by the grace of God.'-Origen, Commentary on the Gospel of John, 202 CE. χωρις γαρ θεου υπερ παντος εγευσατο θανατου οπερ εν τισι κειται της προς Έβραιους αντιγραφοις χαριτι θεου. And leading Peshitta scholar William Norton adds...Origen, nearly 200 years before Nestore lived, mentioned Greek copies which had a like reading. He died about A.D. 254. Theodore, bishop of Mopsuestia, a celebrated Greek writer, who died about A.D. 429, said that some persons had removed the reading, "without God," and had substituted, "by the merciful favor of God."... Tischendorf says, "From these testimonies, it is CERTAIN that the reading, "without God", did not originate with the Nestorians; for Origen found it in his copies." There is no reason, therefore, to suppose that the Nestorian text of the Peshito in Hebrews 2:9, is the result of any change made by them; but there is reason, on the contrary, to regard it as part of the original text of the Peshito; and a proof that the Greek copies which had the same reading in the time of Origen were correct. (William Norton, Introduction to the Syriac Peshito Text (1889), p. xxxix).

So my final major explanation to all of you is this:

Since the Eastern Aramaic Canon has Matthew for its first book and Hebrews for the last book...and since we have early Church Fathers quoting from parts of Matthew and Hebrews that could only come from the Aramaic text...the only logical explanation must be that the entire Nazarene Aramaic canon made its way to Rome before the year 202 CE! If that doesn't speak volumes for the antiquity of this tradition, I don't know what will! And antiquity like that is why we can compare the Aramaic with the Greek and see which reading is better or older.

We now return you to our regularly scheduled timeline, with a slight back-step to about 160 CE...Tatian the Assyrian takes existing Peshitta Aramaic Gospels and combines them into one document (The Diatessaron). The Diatessaron documents greatly outnumber the older Peshitta "Separated Gospels" for more than two centuries. But after the death of Rabulla, bishop of Edessa, in 435 CE, the Separated Gospels are re-instated for liturgical use, and the earliest MSS for Peshitta match this time, ca. 450 CE!

Conclusions

My goal here has been not to trash the Greek at all, but to show how the Eastern Aramaic or "Peshitta" traditions are at least as old as the Greek. From there we can compare readings from both, case by case. In the past, I believe the Aramaic NT Primacy School in general and myself in particular, focused too much on primacy as precedence, as the question of "who came first" cannot be answered in a universal, monolithic way, but depends on geography. The better question is "what happened where" and "what is better."

If though, at the end of all of this, I have demonstrated a greater antiquity and integrity to the Aramaic traditions that can then be used along with the Greek witnesses to help find the best NT readings, I will be most content. As for the rest, the issue of primacy per se is one that will be looked at line by line and place by place. But if, as I alluded to at the start, people ask for where the Aramaic MSS are and what they contain, or ask other questions about the Hebrew NT and even scholars who agree with me obscure the issue or don't answer at all, then I am no longer in agreement with them, because their methods are wrong. In the future, I will endeavor to do better on this.

In the meantime, I think greater care and humility in all of our processes would go a long way, because at the end of the day we need both Greek and Aramaic, because they give the most ancient testimonies about our eternal life in Mashiyach. And the Scripture has this to say about matters of life and death…A man shall not be put to death on the testimony of one witness…Out of the mouths of two witnesses shall every matter be established. (Deut.17:6; 19:15).

PREFACE

(By William H. Sanford)

I would like to point out a few observations I have both observed and discovered from my study of Biblical Hebrew over the years. Anyone attempting to learn Biblical Hebrew from orthodox Jewish teachers today will learn straightway that the word Aramaic is, more often than not, used to commonly describe all Hebrew starting with Moses to the Modern Hebrew used today. This can really muddy the waters of our understanding as you can imagine. For whatever reasoning this is done, I can only guess, but to compare Biblical Hebrew to the Modern Hebrew used today, as if they are an identical language, I would liken that to the falsehood of the Egyptians taking credit for building the Pyramids of Giza, it is pure nonsense!

Biblical Phoenician Script, which has come to also be known as Biblical Paleo Hebrew, seems to be in a unique world all to itself. Many Jewish scholars have believed for thousands of years the individual letters of the language are a Pictorial Script and that words were actually created by combining the separate individual meanings contained in each letter and joining them together to express thoughts. Because of this, many scholars have believed that this script was extremely primitive and have been guilty of comparing it to Egyptian Hieroglyphics. I myself have been guilty in the past of calling it "primitive" because of their influence, but in my on-going studies I have discovered something extremely vital and unique to furthering our education of Biblical Paleo Hebrew. There are over 30,000 individual Paleo Hebrew words that are used throughout the entire Tanakh only ONE TIME! There are tens of thousands of more Paleo Hebrew words that are only used two or three times and thousands more less than a dozen times throughout the Tanakh. This in itself screams to us quite the opposite of any thought of calling Paleo Hebrew a primitive language or primitive script. I verified my finding with the people who put together the Interlinear Scriptural Analyzer.

Many may ask, how can this be when Strong's Hebrew dictionary only has a little over 8,000 words? The answer is simple, the over 30,000 words that appear only ONE TIME and/or relatively only a few times, are words that share common root words with thousands of other words and also share common Strong's numbers. The reason the words vary is simply because of different letters added to common root words as prefix's or suffix's, which will slightly change the over all translation and the pronunciation and is a direct reflection of the unique sophistication of this divine language.

These unique Paleo Hebrew words, that only appear ONE TIME, or only a few times, appear in each book as if the author was actually, quite possibly, creating a unique word for the first time to specifically describe something that had never been described before in the language or at least, possibly not in script. Amazingly all of these words are simply translated into common English words. Now with nearly 400,000 Hebrew words that make up the entire 39 Books of the Tanakh, having nearly 10% of them only being used ONE TIME and most, of which are translated into common English words, can only make us rightfully wonder if we are truly getting the entire expression the author was trying to convey in our English translations.

Many Jewish rabbis for thousands of years have taught that Biblical Hebrew was the heavenly language that was used by Yahuah and His angels and imparted to Adam and Eve and consequently was also the language Yahuah used to speak all creation into existence. If this is true, it certainly makes since that Paleo Hebrew would be extremely sophisticated, and undeniably, a priceless gift given to mankind at creation and spoken for thousands of years. It is unquestionably worthy of our continued study to uncover its limitless possibilities of being the only language ever used on earth that, like our Creator, is truly an eternal "living language". For all other languages and scripts are common and lifeless in comparison and corrupt in nature and will disappear never to be seen or used again after our Messiah returns. Only Biblical Paleo Hebrew is eternal.

It is quite possible that Biblical Paleo Hebrew was the single language on earth described in Genesis 11:1 until the Tower of Babel in Babylon began to be built. Consequently they were judged by Yahuah for their wickedness by the confusing of other languages against all those who participated in evil by giving them corrupt tongues as punishment (Gen 11:7). Something the Israelites will experience eras later, as I will explain. Naturally those who were not guilty of blood were allowed to keep the divine heavenly language, which would ultimately be used by Moses and the Prophets to write the books of the Tanakh.

The Torah is clear about the significant events that happened after the Tower of Babel concerning the perpetual and everlasting covenants Yahuah created beginning with Abraham with the promise to form a nation from the promised child Isaac and his son Jacob, whose name was changed to "Israel" after his 12 sons had been born. Then came the hundreds of years of bitter bondage upon their descendant's as slaves in Egypt as their descendant's began to grow in number. Once the Israelites were delivered through Moses by the hand of Yahuah, then came the eternal Mosaic Covenant and the creation and forming of the 12 Tribes of Israel (Jacob's descendant's) who entered into the Promise Land as a nation of people with a future to become an everlasting kingdom with their own land. Finally came the eternal Davidic Covenant with David and the creation of an everlasting throneship over the 12 Tribes of Israel, the Kingdom of Elohim.

Now keep in mind, the purpose of my writing this is to express that all of Abraham's descendants continued to speak and write with the divine, living language of what we call today Biblical Paleo Hebrew as their native tongue, which technically is called the Biblical Phoenician Script.

So what I am leading up to is that the question has to be asked, "What happened to this divine Biblical language?" Scholars have been trying to figure out the answer to this question for hundreds, if not for thousands of years, and there are many theories, but based upon my acquired knowledge over the years, I believe that I might possibly have an answer to this question. While putting together this current edition, I was able to connect some new puzzle pieces in regard to the comparison of Aramaic to Paleo Hebrew.

Let me set the picture…we know that the divine language was used by the 12 Tribes of Israel for hundreds of years after coming into the Promise Land, but something happened beginning around 724 B.C. when the 10 northern tribes, referred to as the House of Israel, began to be judged by Yahuah for their wickedness (Torahlessness) and were finally given a divorce decree from Yahuah and ultimately scattered to the nations (Jer 3:8). Now the judgment upon the House of Israel was so severe, that when Yahuah removed His Covenant, this act removed His Torah, and subsequently His feast days, His 7th Day Sabbath, along with His kosher laws in regard to clean and unclean, holy and profane. Over the years these people were completely despoiled to the status of GENTILES! In time they totally lost their identity as they began to take on the religious beliefs and practices of worship and were assimilated into the pagan nations of the world.

This brings me to one point I wish to make concerning Aramaic. The fact is, there is really no reason for the language of Aramaic to exist! Scholars will tell you that this language is a sister language to Hebrew, but no one knows exactly when the language began to come into being. I agree with the fact it is a sister language to Hebrew, but it is not a divine language and I will tell you why in a moment. Most scholars believe and agree the language of Aramaic began to be used prior to the 10 Northern Tribes given a divorce decree and that this language began to become more popular after their Diaspora to the nations. So much so, that by the time Y'shua was born it was the primary language both spoken and written in Israel and by Jews all over the world as their native tongue!

Which brings me to the most important question, "Why would the divine Biblical Paleo Hebrew language be lost?" I believe I have discovered a portion of the answer. It is no secret that through years of personal study I have come to agree with all the most famous ancient Jewish rabbis down through history that the free standing Aleph/Tav (את) Character Symbol is a divine mark or seal carrying the prominent meaning from the letters as the Strength of the Covenant. If the two letter symbol (את) was simply a direct object pointer (DOP), with no Spiritual Significance whatsoever, as it is implied today by a minority of rabbis, then the mark should have transferred over to be used in the sister language of Aramaic as a DOP, but it never did. Not even the common Vav/Aleph/Tav (ואת), transferred over into Aramaic, which is used throughout the Tanakh over 2250 times and generally translates the letter Vav (ו) as a conjunction, such as and. But the most surprising revelation is that Father's memorial name (יהוה) never transferred over into Aramaic. Even the Aramaic portions of the books of Ezra and Daniel are void of the free standing Aleph/Tav, the Vav/Aleph/Tav and Father's memorial name! What was actually used in Aramaic, in my humble opinion, was a poor substitute for Father's memorial name, as Marya (מריא), meaning Master Ya, and this word doesn't even contain the word Yah (יה) used in the PERFECT and DIVINE Biblical Paleo Hebrew!

The answer as to why these omissions and substitutes, could be very simple and quite profound…Aramaic is simply a step away from that which was already PERFECT and DIVINE and it was created and given to the House of Israel and eventually to the House of Judah for this reason and also as chastisement from Yahuah when they were cast out of the land and scattered to the nations as a more common and less offensive language to be used by them and among gentiles. Aramaic would further also help the Jews prevent the blaspheming the sacred symbols (Aleph/Tav) and Father's sacred name, which the mention of His memorial name was a capital offense punishable by death. Again, in my humble opinion, these would seem to be primary and logical reasons to consider as to why Aramaic would have come into existence and why it gained in popularity over the divine Paleo Hebrew. And finally, by Aramaic's creation, the Tanakh would be sealed for all eternity with the divine heavenly Paleo Hebrew script as a testament against the Two House's for their sins.

It is common knowledge that there is a small percentage of Biblical Paleo Hebrew words that did transfer over into Aramaic but these words make up an extreme minority compared to the abundance of new words created in Aramaic. There is no doubt that even the Aleph/Tav is incorporated into many Aramaic words that resonate with quite possibly divine purpose as the reader is welcome to explore in this edition.

It is a matter of history that over time Hebrew eventually died out, but towards the end of the 19th century in Europe a Jew named Eliezer Ben Yehuda is credited for taking the first steps to resurrect the ancient language and Yehuda is recognized as the founder of restoring the lost language. Over hundreds of years it developed into the spoken language today called Modern Hebrew. I must admit that the resurrection of this language is nothing short of miraculous, but Modern Hebrew is not the language Moses used to pin the Torah or that the Prophets used throughout the Tanakh! In fact I personally believe that the whole reason Modern Hebrew has been resurrected was to eventually fulfill the prophecy by Zephaniah (3:9) by working backward to ultimately restore the pure divine language of Biblical Paleo Hebrew.

Modern Hebrew cannot be exclusively the fulfillment of Zephaniah's prophecy, for it only stands to reason that at the time he was given the prophecy, the language he was using to write with was Biblical Paleo Hebrew and it had not yet died out, or been replaced. So there was no way it needed to be restored, since he was using the pure language to write the prophecy! Consequently, his prophecy was twofold, inadvertently predicting the demise of the divine language he was using at the time when he recorded the prophecy declaring the return of the pure language to the covenant people, and secondly, since Modern Hebrew did not even existence during Zephaniah's day, it is impossible the prophecy could have been speaking about it being resurrected and thus, Modern Hebrew cannot be the complete fulfillment of Zephaniah's prophecy!

In closing let me simply say, there is no doubt in my mind that Aramaic is a more common language, lacking from the PERFECT and DIVINE Biblical Paleo Hebrew (Phoenician Script) used to write the Tanakh. But it is far superior to the Greek and opens up a new door of opportunity to explore for many westerners and is the reason I and my colleagues have endeavored to create this unique masterpiece rendition and comparison of the ARAMAIC PESHITTA and the GREEK NEW TESTAMENT.

(A) Matti 3:7 who hath showed you to escape from the wrath that cometh? 8 Work, therefore, fruits which are suitable to repentance. 9 Neither ruminate and say within yourselves, that Abraham is father to us; for I say to you that Aloha is able from these stones to raise up sons unto Abraham. 10 But, behold, the axe lieth at the root of the trees; every tree, therefore, which maketh not good fruit is cut down and falleth into the fire. 11 I, indeed, baptize you with water unto repentance; but He who cometh after me is mightier than I;

(G) Matt 3:7 But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? 8 Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance: 9 And think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. 10 And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

(A) Matti 4:6 and said to him, If the Son thou art of Aloha, throw thyself down; for it is written that his angels he shall command concerning thee, and upon their hands they shall bear thee, that thou strike not against a stone thy foot. 7 Jeshu said to him, Again it is written, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy Aloha. 8 Again the Accuser took him to a mountain which is exceeding high, and showed him all the kingdoms of the world and their glory; 9 and said to him, These all to thee will I give, if thou wilt fall and worship me,

(G) Matt 4:6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone. 7 Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. 8 Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them; 9 And saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me.

(G) Matt 4:23 teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people. 24 And his fame went throughout all Syria: and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them. 25 And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judaea, and from beyond Jordan.

this one great shall be called in the kingdom of the heaven.

(A) Matti 5:17 Think not that I came to loose the law or the prophets: not that I might loose, but that I might fulfill. 18 For, Amen I say unto you, that until heaven and earth shall pass away, one yod, or one point, ["One line." - Codex Vienniensis] shall not pass from the law, till all be done. 19 Every one, therefore, who shall set loose one from these least commandments, and shall so teach the children of men, the least shall he be called in the kingdom of heaven: but every one who shall do and teach [them], this one shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

(G) Matt 5:16...see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.17 Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. 18 For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. 19 Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

I say to this one, Go, and he goeth; and to the other, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth. 10 When Jeshu heard this, he was moved with admiration, and said to those with him, Truly I say to you, that in Isroel I have not found faith like this.

(A) Matti 8:24 And, behold, a great commotion was made on the sea, insomuch that the vessel was covered by the waves; but Jeshu himself was asleep. 25 And the disciples approached him, that they might awake him, saying to him, Our Lord, deliver us, we are perishing! 26 And Jeshu said to them, Why are you fearful, you little in faith? Then he arose, and forbade the wind and the sea, and there was a great calm. 27 But the men were struck with wonder, saying, What being is this, to whom the winds and the sea are obedient?

(G) Matt 8:24 And, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was covered with the waves: but he was asleep. 25 And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us: we perish. 26 And he saith unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Then he arose, and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm. 27 But the men marvelled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!

Freely you have received, freely give.

(G) Matt 10:4 Simon the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him. 5 These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: 6 But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. 7 And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. 8 Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.

If the master of the house they have called Beelzebub, how much more his house-sons! 26 You shall not fear, therefore, from them; for there is nothing covered which shall not be revealed, nor secret which shall not be known.

(G) Matt 10:23 But when they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another: for verily I say unto you, Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel, till the Son of man be come. 24 The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord. 25 It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord. But justified is wisdom by her servants. 20 Then began Jeshu to reproach those cities in which were done many of his miracles, and which did not repent, 21 saying, Woe to thee, Korazin! woe to thee, Bethtsaida! for if in Tsur and in Tsaidon those miracles had been done which have been performed in you, they would a while ago in sackcloth and ashes have repented.

(G) Matt 11:18 For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, He hath a devil. 19 The Son of man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold a man gluttonous, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners. But wisdom is justified of her children. 20 Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not: 21 Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes.

you would have condemned the guiltless.

(A) Matti 12:4...how he went to the house of Aloha, and the bread of the table of the Lord did he eat, - that which was not lawful for him to eat, nor for them who were with him, but for the priests only? 5 Or have you not read in the law that the priests in the temple profane the sabbath in it, and are without blame? 6 But I say to you, that one greater than the temple is here. 7 Moreover, if you knew what that mean, " I desire mercy and not a sacrifice," you would not have condemned them who are not faulty.

(G) Matt 12:4 How he entered into the house of God, and did eat the shewbread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the priests? 5 Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the sabbath, and are blameless? 6 But I say unto you, That in this place is one greater than the temple. 7 But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

Wherefore it is lawful on the sabbath-day to do that which is good.

(A) Matti 13:10 And his disciples approached, saying to him, Why dost thou speak to them in parables? 11 He replied and said to them, Because unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of heaven, but unto them it is not given. 12 For unto him who hath, it shall be given, and it shall be increased to him: but [as] to him who hath not, that also which he hath shall be taken from him. 13 On this account I speak to them in parables. Hence they see, and yet see not; and they hear, and yet hear not, neither understand;

(G) Matt 13:10 And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables? 11 He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given. 12 For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath. 13 Therefore speak I to them in parables: because they seeing see not; and hearing they hear not, neither do they understand.

(G) Matt 13:21 Yet hath he not root in himself, but dureth for a while: for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended. 22 He also that received seed among the thorns is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful. 23 But he that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it: which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundredfold, some sixty, some thirty.

(A) Matti 13:38 The field is the world. Now, the good seed are the sons of the kingdom, but the zizania are the sons of the evil one. 39 The adversary who sowed them is Satana; the harvest is the consummation of the world; the reapers are the angels. 40 As, therefore, the zizania are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the completion of this world. 41 The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall collect from his kingdom all those who cause offence, and all who work iniquity,

(G) Matt 13:38 The field is the world: the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; 39 The enemy that sowed them is the devil: the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels. 40 As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world.

(G) Matt 15:18 But those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man. 19 For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies: 20 These are the things which defile a man: but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man. 21 Then Jesus went thence, and departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon. 22 And, behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts and cried unto him, saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil.

(A) Matti 17:1 And after six days, Jeshu took Kipha, and Jakub, and Juchanon his brother, and led them to a high mountain by themselves. 2 And Jeshu was changed before them; and his countenance shone like the sun, and his vestments were resplendent as the light. 3 And there were seen with them Musha and Elia talking with him. 4 Then answered Kipha, and said to Jeshu, My Lord, it is good for us to be here; and if thou art willing, we will make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Musha, and one for Elia.

(G) Matthew 17:1 And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart, 2 And was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. 3 And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him. 4 Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt,

[To the eye of man tell not this vision. From among the dead: plural.]

(G) Matt 17:4 let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias. 5 While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him. 6 And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid. 7 And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid. 8 And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

(A) Matti 18:23 THEREFORE is the kingdom of the heavens likened to a royal person [A man a king.] who would take the account from his servants. 24 And when he began to receive, they brought to him one who owed a myriad talents. 25 And when he had nothing to pay, his lord commanded that they should sell both himself, his wife, and his children, and all that he had, and to pay. 26 And that servant fell and worshipped him, saying, My lord, be patient of spirit toward me, and all things I will pay thee.

(G) Matt 18:22 Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times: but, Until seventy times seven. 23 Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants. 24 And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thousand talents. 25 But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife, and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

That, therefore, which Aloha hath conjoined, man shall not separate. 7 They said to him, Why then did Musha direct that he should give a writing of dismissal and send her away? 8 He said to them, Musha, on account of the hardness of your heart, permitted you to send away your wives; but from the beginning it was not so. 9 And I say to you that whosoever shall forsake his wife who is not adulterous, and take another, committeth adultery; and whosoever taketh the deserted one, committeth adultery.

(G) Matt 19:5 And said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh? 6 Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder. 7 They say unto him, Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away? 8 He saith unto them, Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so.

(A) Matti 19:21 Jeshu saith to him, If thou wilt become perfect, go, sell thy possession and give to the poor, and there shall be for thee a treasure in heaven: and come after me. 22 But he, the young man, heard this word, and went away with sadness, for he had great property. 23 But Jeshu said to his disciples, Amen I say unto you, that it is difficult for the rich to enter the kingdom of heaven. 24 Again I say to you, that it is easier for a camel to enter through the aperture of a needle, than the rich to enter into the kingdom of Aloha.

(G) Matt 19:20 The young man saith unto him, All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet? 21 Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me. 22 But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions. 23 Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven.

(A) Matti 21:24 Jeshu answered and said to them, I will also ask you one word; and if you will tell me, I will also tell you by what authority I do these things. 25 The baptism of Juchanon, whence is it, from heaven or from men? But they thought within themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven, he saith to us, Why did ye not believe him? 26 And if we shall say, From men, we fear from the crowd; for all have regarded Juchanon as a prophet.

(G) Matt 21:24 And Jesus answered and said unto them, I also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell me, I in like wise will tell you by what authority I do these things. 25 The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men? And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say unto us, Why did ye not then believe him? 26 But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people; for all hold John as a prophet.

By the Lord was this done, and it is wondrous in our eyes. 43 On this account I tell you, that the kingdom of Aloha is taken from you, and shall be given to a people who will yield fruits. 44 And whosoever shall fall upon this stone shall be broken; but every one upon whom it shall fall, it will scatter him.

(G) Matt 21:42 Jesus saith unto them, Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes? 43 Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. 44 And whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

(A) Matti 22:12 And he said to him, My friend, how didst thou enter here, when thou hast not the vestments of the feast? But he was silent. 13 Then said the king unto the servitors, Bind his hands and his feet, and cast him forth into the darknesses without: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. 14 For many are the called, but few the chosen. 15 THEN went the Pharishee and took counsel how they might ensnare him in discourse. 16 And they sent to him their disciples with certain of the household of Herodes, saying to him, Doctor, we know that thou art resolutely true, and that the way of Aloha in truth thou teachest; neither carriest thou fear for man, for thou acceptest not the person of men.[Faces of men.]

(G) Matt 22:12 And he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither not having a wedding garment? And he was speechless. 13 Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. 14 For many are called, but few are chosen. 15 Then went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

(A) Matti 24:22 And unless those days be cut short, none could live of all flesh: but on account of the chosen those days shall be cut short. 23 Then if any one shall say to you, Lo, here is the Meshicha, or there: believe them not. 24 For there shall arise false Meshichas and prophets of untruth; and they shall give forth magnificent signs, so as to seduce, if possible, the chosen also. 25 If therefore they shall say to you, observe! I have told you before,

(G) 24:22 And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened. 23 Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. 24 For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. 25 Behold, I have told you before.

(G) Matt 26:36 Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane, and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder. 37 And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be sorrowful and very heavy. 38 Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me. 39 And he went a little further, and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt.

(A) Matti 27:32 And when they had gone forth, they found a Kurinean man whose name was Shemun: this man they compel to carry his cross. 33And they came to a place which is called Gogultho, which is expounded, The skull. 34 And they gave him to drink vinegar mingled with gall: and he tasted, but was not willing to drink. 35 And when they had crucified him, they divided his garments by lot: (second half of this verse WAS NOT IN THE ORIGINAL PESHITTA, but was added from the Peshitto, which is a translation from the Greek into Aramaic at a later date)

(G) Matt 27:31 And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucify him. 32 And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross. 33 And when they were come unto a place called Golgotha, that is to say, a place of a skull, 34 They gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall: and when he had tasted thereof, he would not drink. 35 And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.

(A) Matt 28:3 His aspect was like lightning, and his raiment was white as the snow. 4 And with fear of him they who were watching were shaken, and became as the dead. 5 But the angel answered and said to the women, Fear not ye; for I know that for Jeshu who was crucified you are seeking. 6 He is not here: for he is risen, even as he said. Come, see the place in which our Lord was laid: 7 and go with speed, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the house of the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galila. There shall you see him. Lo, I have told you.

(G) Matt 28:3 His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow: 4 And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men. 5 And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. 6 He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

(G) Mark 2:12 And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion. 13 And he went forth again by the sea side; and all the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them. 14 And as he passed by, he saw Levi the son of Alphaeus sitting at the receipt of custom, and said unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed him. 15 And it came to pass, that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners sat also together with Jesus and his disciples: for there were many, and they followed him.

And he took the hand of the damsel and said to her damsel arise

(A) Marq 5:37 And he did not permit any one to go with him, except Shemun Kipha, and Jacub, and Juchanon, brother of Jacub. 38 And they came to the house of that master of the synagogue, and he saw how they made a tumult, and wept and bewailed. 39 And he entered, and said to them, Why make you a tumult, and weep? the damsel is not dead, but asleep. 40 And they derided him. But Jeshu put them all forth, and took the father of the damsel, and her mother, and those who were with her, and went in where the damsel was lying. 41 And he took the hand of the damsel, and said to her, Damsel, arise.

(G) Mark 5:37 And he suffered no man to follow him, save Peter, and James, and John the brother of James. 38 And he cometh to the house of the ruler of the synagogue, and seeth the tumult, and them that wept and wailed greatly. 39 And when he was come in, he saith unto them, Why make ye this ado, and weep? the damsel is not dead, but sleepeth. 40 And they laughed him to scorn. But when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, and entereth in where the damsel was lying.

(A) Marq 6:11 And every one who will not receive you, nor hear you, when you are going out from thence, beat off the dust that is beneath your feet for their testimony. And Amen I say to you, That it shall be more tolerable for Sadum and for Amura in the day of the judgment, than for that city. 12 And they went forth, and preached that they should repent. 13 And many devils they cast out, and anointed with oil the sick, and healed many. 14 AND Herodes the king heard concerning Jeshu, for his name had become known; and he said, Juchanon the Baptizer hath risen from among the dead; [The house of the dead.] therefore works of power [Powers.] are wrought by him.

(G) Mark 6:11 And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, shake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrha in the day of judgment, than for that city. 12 And they went out, and preached that men should repent. 13 And they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

(A) Marq 6:26 And greatly grieved was the king; but, for the sake of the oath, and the sake of the guests, [Recliners.] he could not deprive [Or, defraud.] her. 27 But the king despatched at once a sentinel, and commanded that he should bring the head of Juchanon. And he went and cut off the head of Juchanon in the house of the bound, 28 and brought it in a dish and gave to the damsel, and the damsel herself gave to her mother. 29 And his disciples heard and went, took up his corpse, and laid it in the place of the buried.

(G) Mark 6:26 And the king was exceeding sorry; yet for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him, he would not reject her. 27 And immediately the king sent an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought: and he went and beheaded him in the prison, 28 And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel gave it to her mother. 29 And when his disciples heard of it, they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb.

He saith to him, Behold, from his childhood. 22 And many times he casteth him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but whatever thou canst, help me, and have mercy upon me. 23 Jeshu saith to him, If thou canst believe, every thing can be to him who believeth. 24 And in a moment the father of the youth cried out, weeping and saying, I am believing; help the defect [Poverty, imperfection, defect.] of my faith.

(G) Mark 9:36 And he took a child, and set him in the midst of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them, 37 Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me. 38 And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbad him, because he followeth not us.

is possible with Aloha

(A) Marq 10:24 But his disciples were astonished at his words. And Jeshu answered again, and said to them, My sons, how hard is it for those who trust on their riches to enter into the kingdom of Aloha! 25 It is easier for a camel to go through the hole of a needle, than for a rich to enter into the kingdom of Aloha. 26 And they were the more astonished, and said among themselves, Who can be saved? 27 Jeshu beheld them and said to them, With the sons of men this is not possible, but with Aloha: for every thing is possible with Aloha.

(G) Mark 10:24 And the disciples were astonished at his words. But Jesus answereth again, and saith unto them, Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God! 25 It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. 26 And they were astonished out of measure, saying among themselves, Who then can be saved?

And when stand you to pray forgive whatever that have you against any man that also your Father

(A) Marq 11:23 Amen I say to you. That whosoever shall say to this mountain. Be lifted up. and fall into the sea, and shall not be divided in his heart, but shall believe that that thing which he speaketh is. he shall have the thing that he saith. 24 On this account I tell you, that every thing whatever you supplicate and ask. believe that you receive. and it shall be unto you. 25 And when you stand to pray. forgive whatever you have against any man: and your Father who is in heaven will also forgive you your transgressions.

(G) Mark 11:22 And Jesus answering saith unto them, Have faith in God. 23 For verily I say unto you. That whosoever shall say unto this mountain. Be thou removed. and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith. 24 Therefore I say unto you. What things soever ye desire. when ye pray, believe that ye receive them. and ye shall have them.

When her branches are tender, and she shoots forth her leaves, you know that the summer draws nigh: 29 so also you, when you see that these things are done, understand that it is near, even at the door. 30 Amen I tell you. That this race shall not pass until these all shall be. 31 Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away. 32 But of that day and of that hour man knoweth not, nor the angels of heaven, nor the Son, but only the Father.

(G) Mark 13:28 Now learn a parable of the fig tree; When her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is near: 29 So ye in like manner, when ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the doors. 30 Verily I say unto you, that this generation shall not pass, till all these things be done. 31 Heaven and earth shall pass away: but my words shall not pass away. 32 But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father.

And after a little while those who stood said to Kipha, Assuredly thou art from them, for thou art also a Galiloia, and thy speech is similar. 71 But he began to imprecate and to swear, I know not this man of whom thou speakest. And in the hour the cock crew the second time. 72 And Shemun remembered the word that Jeshu had spoken to him, That before the cock should crow twice, three times thou shalt deny me. And he began to weep.

(G) Mark 14:69 And a maid saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by, This is one of them. 70 And he denied it again. And a little after, they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art a Galilaean, and thy speech agreeth thereto. 71 But he began to curse and to swear, saying, I know not this man of whom ye speak. 72 And the second time the cock crew.
